The international non-qualifying season ended with U.S. skaters posting one of the best records in recent years. A total of thirty-seven medals were won at twelve international competitions. These include fifteen gold medals, fourteen silver medals, and eight bronze medals. The breakdown by events was: Men's singles — 5 gold, 4 silver, 3 bronze; Ladies' singles — 7 gold, 3 silver, 1 bronze; Dance — 2 gold, 4 silver; and

Pairs — 1 gold, 3 silver and 4 bronze.

Suzanne Semanick and Scott Gregory were triple medalists in international competition. Double medalists include Daniel Doran, Erik Larson, Jill Trenary, Holly Cook, Cindy Bortz, Natalie and Wayne Seybold, Rudy Galindo, Ashley Stevenson and Scott Wendland, and Tonia Kwiatkowski. It was a fine season of which all of our International Team can be rightfully proud, and we offer our heartiest congratulations to every one of the sixty competitors who represented the U.S. so honorably.

In conjunction with the 1987 World Figure Skating Championships in Cincinnati, the Taft Museum will present a special exhibition entitled "Ice Skating in 17th Century Dutch Art." The exhibition will include more than forty works on loan from Dutch and American institutions and private collections. The World Figure Skating Hall of Fame and Museum is participating in this prestigious exhibition with the loan of twenty seventeenth century skating prints from the Gillis Grafström "Skating in Art" collection," along with several examples of antique skates, including the exceedingly rare bone skates. While in Cincinnati, plan time to view this special exhibit at the Taft Museum.

The skating community and thousands of spectators throughout the country were greatly disappointed with the news of the cancellation of the Torvill and Dean tour of the United States. Following a performance in Portland, Maine, Dean tripped and fell while leaving the ice after posing for photographs and broke his wrist. According to their press representatives, "The entire U.S. sixty-city tour has been canceled indefinitely. It is hoped that it will be rescheduled, but it is impossible to say when." It seems unlikely that anything could be arranged before late summer or early fall. Skating will keep you posted on any news of the continuation of the tour as soon as it is announced.

According to a report in Pirouette magazine from Germany, Josef Sabovcik of Czechoslovakia will not compete in the 1987 European or World Figure Skating Championships. An injured knee kept him out of the medals at last year's Worlds. Recent surgery has not healed sufficiently to allow him to compete. He is, however, planning to be back in competition for the 1988 season.

On
A Choreographic Question

The question posed is: "How does choreography enhance or hinder personal style and presentation of a skater's image?" Before discussing this, we should define what choreography and style is in skating.

Choreography is the arrangement of purposeful movements into a form that creates a conscious or unconscious design in space and time. This can be in the form of body designs where you use the body and limbs to form a shape in space. For example, when your body bends forward and forms a curve, it makes a visual shape that can be seen as long as you retain that position. You can also make tracing designs which are those drawn in space with your limbs and other parts of your body. All this is done, of course, while moving through a program, performing the necessary elements that are required for competition.

Arranging jumps, spins, and footwork in a program to music, at different places in the rink, connected by crossovers, is not choreographing a program. That is setting a program, putting in the foundation of necessary items.

Style is a manner of expression, a way of executing a task, or performing an action. It is the manner in which a skating program is executed; the manner of action of a particular performer. Style involves your attitude. To have style is to search continuously for something new and different, by being able to do something new with the same old steps and with the same body.

Most skaters below the Junior level have not usually developed a personal style, (there are always exceptions) although one can see glimmers of it now and then. Therefore, it is of great importance that the choreographer understands structure and form of movement, so that movement can be made in a more profound manner. This can be done by guiding and developing the skater into an awareness of movement and a deeper sensitivity through which the skater can relate to his/her own body.

It is very important that the choreography be arranged so that it shows off the assets of the skater and diminishes his/her liabilities. This involves looking at each skater as a sculptor looks at a new piece of clay. The sculptor considers the texture, color, and amount before beginning his work. So must the choreographer consider the flexibility, posture, personality, music, movement experience, technical ability, and body contours, before setting a movement. What may look good on one skater, or the choreographer's own body, may look clumsy and disastrous on another.

Many times movements can be created or arranged that will cover up body faults as well as technical deficiencies. If a skater strokes with arms bobbing up and down as if in flight, a simple structural arm movement can be given that will give the skater a "clean line" that will not distract the eye.

If a skater seems to have a comedic flair, a competitive program can be enhanced by injecting humor into the choreography, as long as the skater is able to carry it through with the efficiency of the technical elements.

It is a mistake to integrate complicated and overabundant choreography into a program when the skater is not capable of landing a fair amount of jumps consistently, or perform the other necessary elements required. Then it looks as if the program is "over-choreographed." In cases like this, it is preferable to keep the choreography simple, with movements that help the skater look relaxed and at ease; remembering that choreography demands inventiveness, judgment, and insight on the part of the person creating the movement.

JEAN WINDER RETIRES

After being a mainstay of the USFSA Headquarters Staff for twelve years, Jean Winder retired on December 31. Jean has been a member of the USFSA since 1956 when she joined through the Denver FSC. As she became involved in club activities and competitions, she began working in accounting rooms and was later appointed a National Accountant.

"In those days, we did not have Sectional/Regional Accountants. In fact, we only had about twelve or fourteen accountants in the entire country," she recalls, "So, it was not unusual for me to work three qualifying competitions each year. I was Assistant Accountant at the 1961 Nationals and knew most of the young people on our World Team quite well. The day of the airplane crash was an extremely bad time for me and my family."

Jean also trained and became Test Chairman for the Denver Club for five years and helped form the old Arapahoe FSC, since merged with the Denver FSC. She joined the Broadmoor SC in 1969 and following training was appointed a Low Test Figure Judge. In 1974, she moved to Boston to assist her husband, Roy Winder, Executive Director of the USFSA, in running the central office. She returned to Colorado when the new headquarters office was built in Colorado Springs in 1979.

Jean has worked in almost every phase of main office operations, and along with the current President (then Competitions Chairman) Hugh C. Graham, Jr., M.D., she also designed the award medals now used in all qualifying competitions. She has been responsible for the grading and recording of the judges' examinations and all the trial judge work from the thirteen qualifying competitions for many years. She may be retiring from the daily office routine but not from involvement with the Association.

"The judges' exams and trial work, I will continue to do, as I rejoin the ranks of the volunteers, which have always been the backbone of the USFSA," she states. "I shall miss the office and the many friends that I have there. It has been a privilege to work for the USFSA, and I am looking forward to continuing to serve for a good many years as a volunteer."

The Association is deeply indebted to Jean for her many years of dedication and service, both as a volunteer and as an employee. She will be missed at the headquarters office but will remain an important part of the USFSA family.

A LETTER FROM JULIE

A recent letter from Julie McKinstry brought good news and words of deep appreciation to USFSA members.

"The donations of blood and flowers and letters of support have been outstanding," she wrote. "I am in remission and have one more round of chemotherapy beginning in December. Having the USFSA behind you at a time like this means more than words can say."

Sincerely,

Julie McKinstry Rustand

SKATE CANADA '86

by Gerri Walbert

The Canadians captured the Nova Trophy at Skate Canada with gold medal wins in the ladies' and pair's events and a bronze medal in dance, holding off a fierce challenge by a strong Soviet team headed by the World Champion pair, Gordeeva and Grinkov. The Americans had problems in the compulsories, but came through with outstanding performances by Christopher Bowman, Suzanne Semanick and Scott Gregory, and Natalie and Wayne Seybold to win two silvers and a bronze, respectively.

Men

Vitaly Egorov of the Soviet Union took an early lead in the figures which he did not relinquish. He was closely followed by Grzegorz Filipowski of Poland and Frederic Harpaz of France. Christopher Bowman of the Los Angeles FSC had problems on his first figure and was not able to place higher than sixth in this portion of the men's event.

Hampered by a first position skating order in the short, Bowman nevertheless was undaunted and posted high marks for his flawless "Tico-Tico" program and held off the other nine skaters. His win moved him up to fourth place going into the long. Egorov took second in the short and retained the overall lead, followed by Filipowski in second and Petr Barna of Czechoslovakia in third. Scott Kurttila, Seattle SC, was in eighth position after the short program, beginning with an eighth in figures and seventh in the short.

In the long program, Bowman was in a class by himself, skating a seven triple performance that was technically and artistically brilliant to Hungarian themes. He brought a mesmerized audience to it's feet in a thundering ovation and received marks from 5.7 to a host of 5.8's and 5.9's for both technical merit and artistic impression. Bowman's domination and win of the long event vaulted him to second place and a silver medal.

Egorov, skating an athletic program with five triples, came in second in the long with marks ranging from 5.2 to a high of 5.7 which were sufficient to hold onto his lead and win the gold medal.

Makoto Kano of Japan and Neil Paterson of Canada did triple Axels in their long programs and skated well enough to place third and fourth respectively, but out of the medals, finishing sixth and fourth overall.

Filipowski began his long with a lot of enthusiasm and energy but appeared to tire midway through his program and finished fifth in the long which held him in place for the bronze medal. Kurttila skated an audience-pleasing long with style and flair, but was only able to place seventh in the long, and holding seventh overall.

Ladies

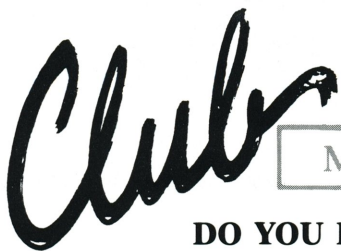

Elizabeth Manley of Canada dominated the field of six ladies, beginning with a convincing win in the compulsory figures. Joanne Conway of Great Britain, who trains at the Broadmoor, was in second in figures, and Natalia Lebedeva in third. Americans, Tracey Damigella and Kelly Szmurlo placed fifth and sixth, respectively.

Manley had minor problems in the short program and came in third, but retained her overall lead. Lebedeva won the short with a strong performance and put her into second place going into the long program. However, an unfortunate fall in the long forced her to withdraw, but she was not injured seriously and will return to the ice soon.

Claudia Leistner of the Federal Republic of Germany performed a clean short to place second, followed by Damigella who did triple Salchow to double toe for her combination and though it was nice and clean, she was only able to place fourth. Szmurlo fell out of her combination and finished sixth.

The long program was all Manley's. Even though she skated a relatively conservative performance with only two triples, they were solid and delivered with style and grace. She displayed a great deal of confidence and has an exuberant personality on the ice, winning both audience approval and the gold medal for the event.

MANAGEMENT

DO YOU HAVE TROUBLE FINDING JUDGES?

by Homer Hagedorn

Does there anywhere breathe a Test Chairman who never has said to himself, "To judge these tests, there are no judges alive or dead?" In some areas, notably California, and the Northwest, forming a Judges' Bureau has provided just the support needed by overburdened Test Chairmen and overworked judges. A Judges' Bureau can be a great help wherever more than three or four skating clubs are geographically close enough together to permit easy travel among them both for judges and skaters.

If you need to cover a territory greater than one metropolitan area or live in the wide open spaces, where judges and clubs are few and far apart, a centralized judges' list may be a better idea than a Judges' Bureau. Such a list can give details beyond what the Rulebook includes, and can be kept up to date better than the Rulebook. Having a judges' list makes calling judges a lot easier.

In New England, the list includes over ninety judges, eight referees, and thirteen accountants. It is distributed to clubs, test chairmen, and to all those judges, referees, and accountants named in the list itself. Those involved include all the member clubs of the New England Inter-Club Council (over sixty clubs). The judges' list gives names, addresses, phone numbers, and current levels and types of appointments.

This system works only if a knowledgeable, energetic person is available who wants to take responsibility for frequent revisions. Since all officials known to exist receive copies of the list for themselves, once the system is running the officials themselves will take on a lot of the burden of ensuring accuracy. They quickly let you know if any of your information about them is out of date.

Judges' lists have been used very successfully in the Midwest and other parts of the country as well as in New England. For more information, call Shirley Taylor (617-823-0354) or Walter Lupke (219-432-2340). Ms. Taylor created the New England judges' list and continues to edit and publish it. Mr. Lupke is currently chairman of the Program Development Committee. He has firsthand awareness of how judges' lists have been used in the Midwest for a number of years.

What is a Judges' Bureau and how does it work? Actually, it's just files listing all the judges available and all the participating clubs running test sessions. The files are used to invite—in strict rotation—all eligible judges to judge at each participating club. Of course, the needs of judges who cannot judge at certain times, for example, during working hours, will be honored. Sessions that require a panel able to judge high-level tests will be satisfied. So, a particular judge might be skipped for a session. But that judge's name will be at the top of that club's file for the next session, until (s)he judges at that club. Furthermore, notes will be kept in the file to indicate when and what the judge actually judged at that club. If a judge declined an invitation to judge, the date of the session and the circumstances (s)he cited will also be recorded, before his or her card goes to the bottom of the pile for that club.

Usually the person who operates the judge's bureau is a past Test Chairman from a local club. She or he should be well-known to the local clubs and respected for knowledge and integrity. A bureau coordinator should serve no longer than a year or two in that role. Potential burnout is a problem. Perceived corruption is equally bad. To assure that the situation is healthy, and to demonstrate to the public that it is healthy, create a committee of Test Chairmen or other leaders drawn from different clubs to carry out a systematic audit of the coordinator's actions, results to be published to the member clubs every six months. Preferably, the Audit Team Chairman should be a National Judge.

Other ground rules to keep in mind are:

1. No parent of test skaters can become coordinator of the Judges' Bureau.
2. No judge below Gold or National level can become coordinator of the Judges' Bureau (to avoid concerns about preferential trial assignments).
3. File information about judges should be updated annually. How far will or can the judge travel? When is the judge available to judge? And (from the Rulebook) what tests and competitions is the judge qualified to do?
4. Persuade clubs, judges, and bureau coordinator to split test sessions, so that they will be either on high test or low test panels but not both. This provides more opportunities for low test judges to judge, to keep interested, to gain experience, and to develop their skills.

The mechanics of a Judges' Bureau are simple. A Test Chairman calls the coordinator when seeking to set up a test session. The Test Chairman explains what he wants judges to do, and when he would like them to do it. The coordinator tries to satisfy the Chairman's requirements, but basically it's a negotiation between bureau coordinator and Test Chairman in cases where another club has asked for a test session for the same day, or there are other problems in what the Chairman wants to do.

Having agreed on date and other requirements, the coordinator then calls the next eligible judges for judging at that club and keeps on going through the file until the judging panel(s) are filled. He then notifies the Test Chairman which judges to expect, and updates his files to show who has been asked, who has accepted, and what the judging session is slated to include.

In addition to solving a difficult practical problem for Test Chairmen, the Judges' Bureau can be a major step forward in club collaboration. In itself, collaboration among clubs is useful, but more than that, collaboration can be a first step towards club mergers.

If you need more information about Judges' Bureaus, call Joan Burns (415-697-2603) or write her at 206 Barclay Ave., Millbrae, CA 94030. Ms. Burns is a former chairman of the USFSA Membership Committee and is one of the founders of the Judges' Bureau in the San Francisco Bay-Peninsula area.

NEW ADDRESS
225 Blair Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55103
(612) 292-9256

Last month, you will recall, a few of us intrepid professionals had challenged ourselves that we could evaluate better than official judges could. You will also recall we had managed to judge only four skaters in a certain event before succumbing to the jitters, and there were four more skaters to judge. It seemed a hundred!

We scribbled, erased, cussed, moaned, and fumbled. Finally, we sat back and breathed deeply. Maybe it wasn't so bad after all. Here come the judges with their marks. We will copy them down and then have a nice quiet discussion amongst ourselves.

The next scene was not a proud moment in the professional ranks. It went something like this:

Bob: Hey, Maribel, what was your program mark on Carol?

Maribel: Who?

Ann: The first skater.

Austin: Carol was the second skater.

Gene: She skated third. Betty skated second. Maribel: I can't make out my writing. Who skated last?

Bob: Kristin.

Austin: She skated next to last. Emily was last.

Ann: You're crazy. I have . . .

When we got the names straightened out we finally got to the marks.

Maribel: I gave Carol 4.6, 4.5.

Ann: I gave her 4.5, 4.4.

Austin: I've got her 3.9, 3.9.

Maribel: Then what did you give Harriet?

Austin: 4.7, 4.8.

Gene: You gave her WHAT?

Maribel: She didn't do ANYTHING!

Bob: I gave her 5.0's.

Ann: Well, that's just stupidity!

Bob: Do you realize her routine was in a class by itself?

Gene: She two-footed four . . . FOUR . . . jumps . . .

Austin: Don't be ridiculous. Her free foot merely brushed the ice on three of them . . .

Maribel: She almost fell on two of those jumps . . .

Bob: Your Carol is the one that did the fall-ing. Hah!

Ann: Look who's talking! That junk of Harriet's . . .

TURNER'S TURN

Let's have the curtain quietly fall on the scene. We didn't talk to each other for a week. What a nightmare. However, the shock effect made its mark on all of us. I became ashamed I'd ever yelled at a judge. Maribel stopped throwing chairs. Ann became far less shrill. Austin became even quieter, and Bob was heard to mutter that the judges seemed to have improved.

Indeed, we tried judging several more times in the years following with vastly better results. We choked our voices down to violent whispering, kept the dirty looks subdued, and even became better judges. In fact, by practicing judging we became pretty good, almost as good as the judges themselves . . . almost.

Each time we learned more. Each time we felt closer to the responsibility—and resulting tension—official judges undergo. Each time we realized we could never truly duplicate the judge's role. No matter how hard we tried we could not take on their responsibility!

One fellow identified it for me one day. He was a teenager umpiring a little-league game and ignoring the heckling fathers for several innings. Finally a particularly aggravating poppa said something a bit personal about one call, whereupon the youngster turned and said fairly mildly, "Look, that's the way I saw it. If you want to come out here and take over, fine, you're welcome to it. But I was told to umpire and that's the way I saw it."

He was trying to say in simple terms what is incredibly difficult to explain. In the seat of responsibility the view is different. There is a different feel to it, a different perspective, a strange pressure, one that puts you on stage facing a thousand eyes. You are forced to look at everything. Distractions are out. You can't go get a Coke or have a smoke or tell a joke. You have to . . . watch carefully . . . and not . . . miss . . . anything.

A Retrospective

by Frank Loeser Nowosad

When the editor of Skating asked me to write an article on the changes in skating with respect to music, I shied away from the project, for I knew that I would contribute an offering that was not celebratory. Despite the alterations that skating has undergone in the last four decades, the attitudes towards its music have gotten progressively worse. Of course, there have been exceptions—the choices of John Curry, Jane Torvill and Christopher Dean, Judy Blumberg and Michael Seibert, and many of the Soviet ice dancers—but these have been exceptions and, curiously, save for in the dance event, the musical integrity expressed by these artists has had little effect on the greater body of competitors, coaches, and judges.

A recently released commercial videotape*, Senior Ladies Champions, 1953-1984, which chronicles twenty-five winning performances of the senior ladies' title at the U.S. Nationals, reinforces my pessimism. On first viewing of this remarkable array of solos the overall effect is buoyed up by the brilliance of a few performances, but on the second and third sit-through there is a realization that one is watching the gradual disintegration of artistry in women's skating.

Three performances are musically and choreographically outstanding: two by Tenley Albright; the first in 1954 to excerpts from the suite from Der Rosenkavalier by Richard Strauss and the other, in 1956, to an arrangement of the music from the ballet, Offenbach in the Underworld; and then one by Janet Lynn in 1973 to an edit of Impressionist music structured about Maurice Ravel's La Valse. One sees that Lynn's program is the final evolution of study done over the four years that she was American champion and the end result is not only an artistic achievement of the highest order but also the apex of women's skating in the world. Nothing in women's skating to date compares. A pointed and telling comparison can be made with another La Valse variation, that by Linda Fratianne in 1977.

The history of women's skating since Lynn's performance in 1973 is essentially the history of the triple jump. What senior lady today would consider Der Rosenkavalier? So fundamentally similar were the arrangements of music and variations of movement chosen by the top three American ladies in 1986 that they could have exchanged tapes and choreography without any appreciable alteration in end effect or result.

The thrill of the Albright and Lynn performances lies in seeing that they realized their uniqueness and understood that their music was an extension of their special qualities. No senior lady today can (or will?) risk such individuality.

The changes that have come about cannot be laid at the feet of the young talents who have expressed them, but rather on the system of competition that has evolved since World War II. In any kind of competition there is a compulsion to be objective and quantitative—it is much easier to rank by counting rotations and repetitions than by allotting a numerical value to, say, an interpretation of Bolero over Scheherazade.

In a report written on a Skate Canada competition in 1985 (Tracings, holiday issue) the writer, Carol Stafford, quoted a report by the referee of the dance event, the Austrian Hans Kutschera, who said:

"There are so many different ideas in dance and that is why it is so interesting to the public. But it is necessary that we bring back the rules because it is getting difficult for the judges"

Mr. Kutschera (who subsequently became chairman of the ISU dance technical committee) pointed out the popularity of the dance event and, perhaps inadvertently, suggested that pleasing audiences is incompatible with good judging. Efficient judging is also incompatible with artistic skating and herein lies the problem of the current scene.

Precision Review

by T. Sundae Bafu

A LOOK BACK AT PRECISION SKATING

Precision skating competitions at all levels have become a prominent part of our sport in relatively recent years. The number of teams participating increases yearly.

Through the years, club shows everywhere have been a highlight of the skating season. Young, old, recreational, competitive, and test skaters look forward to joining their friends in group numbers. The concept of skating together, forming circles, wheels, and the "big kick line" have brought smiles, giggles, and enjoyment to all involved. Skaters of all abilities have been encouraged to participate. A great deal of technical knowledge has never been a requirement—just enthusiasm and the will to perform. Friendships have been made, and many skaters who have been on the verge of leaving the sport have returned to the rinks to be a part of the club show. It became apparent that "group skating" was a fun activity and kept skaters actively involved.

In 1954, Dr. Richard Porter of Ann Arbor, Michigan, formed a group of youngsters from grades 9-12 to actively develop the group into a team. This group provided these teens (who might otherwise have withdrawn from skating) the opportunity to continue training, with goals and a feeling of self-achievement in the sport. The team was named the Hockettes. The original team was comprised of sixteen members. Over the years with popularity, it grew to a thirty-two member group.

Dr. Porter supervised the Hockettes for twenty years, assisted by Mrs. Margaret Faulkner. Upon Dr. Porter's retirement, Mrs. Faulkner took over the team. The Hockettes were the U.S. precision pioneers.

Throughout those years, the Hockettes gave many exhibitions to enthusiastic audiences. They performed at hockey games, the Shrine Circus, and Champions on Ice in New York City. The Hockettes were exciting and creative. Their performance at the Memorial Auditorium in Buffalo at the Shrine Circus was particularly impressive. Every four or five skaters wore the same style dress but in different colors. As the lines spliced and merged, the colors added to the already attractive patterns formed.

In the mid-1970's, Canada picked up the precision ball and ran, and what a run! Teams began forming in numerous clubs in all provinces. The Ilderton Winter Club, Ilderton, Ontario, Canada sponsored one of the first precision championships. It was open to Canadian and U.S. teams. The first year there were nine Senior teams. The Hockettes were the only U.S. entry. For three consecutive years the Hockettes won the Senior Championship at the Ilderton Championships.

In 1976, Ann Arbor hosted the first precision only non-qualifying championship. This was a major breakthrough. There were eight Senior, six Juniors, and ten Novice teams. The majority of entries were Canadian. This competition did much to promote interest in precision in the states.

U.S. teams started forming in various areas of the country. Wyandotte, Kalamazoo, and Fraser, all in Michigan, were moving fast. The Essex precision team of New Jersey, Hamden, Hayden, SC of Boston in Massachusetts, and Buffalo, New York were developing gradually.

On the West Coast "drill team" skating was prevalent. In San Diego, the Ickettes were one of the first West Coast teams to adopt the "precision" concept. With enthusiasm and determination, the Ickettes raised funds to travel almost two thousand miles to the Ilderton Precision Championship, where they received a medal in the Junior division.

Today, the largest non-qualifying U.S. competitions are held in Buffalo and Lake Placid, New York and Fraser, Michigan (Mid-America). Lake Placid and Buffalo have had close to one-hundred entries in the past years. The majority of entries are still Canadian, but U.S. entries are increasing.

In 1984, the first National Precision Team Championships were sanctioned by the USFSA and held in Bowling Green, Ohio, with thirty-eight teams participating. Sectional meets were begun the previous year. The following three years have witnessed a rapid growth of interest in the sport.

Precision skating did not just bloom overnight. A great deal of time, effort, work, and energy went into its development. No article on the growth of precision skating would be complete without mentioning those involved in the early stages of its development: Dr. Richard Porter, Mrs. Margaret Faulkner, Mr. Albert Viviani, Dr. Louis Rossoni, Mrs. Ann Fauver, Mrs. Nona Bafo, Mr. Roger Geary, and Mr. Virgil Widler.

These people worked diligently over the years spreading the precision word, some establishing original guidelines; others encouraging coaches and teams through seminars and workshops; and again others stimulating coaches, teams, and parents through promoting high caliber precision competitions. Without their love of skating, precision, and dedication to the sport, precision skating would not be received as enthusiastically as it is today.

A special thanks to our Canadian neighbors, Lloyd and Audrey Ogilvie, who helped to encourage, promote, and support the development of precision skating in many areas of the U.S. and Canada.

Precision is here to stay. It has become the backbone of many clubs and is still growing and learning. Enthusiasm for precision is proving to be contagious. We are approaching our fourth U.S. National Precision Team Championships. Who knows what lies ahead. Worlds? Olympics? We're on a roll. But, let's remember to keep the fun and enjoyment in precision skating, which after all, was the original reason for its creation.

Many thanks to Margaret Faulkner and Ann Fauver for providing historical background.

Dealer Inquiries Invited

by Doug Mattis

In what has already been an outstanding season for U.S. international competitors to date, the success continued in Budapest, October 30 to November 2. While attention in North America was focused on Skate Canada, held at the same time, the attention in Europe was on the Novarat Trophy (formerly the Danubius Thermal Trophy). American skaters garnered four medals, a gold, a silver, and two bronzes, in a strong showing over competitors from eighteen countries.

MEN

In the Men's event, Fernand Fedronic of France emerged as the early leader following the figure event. Brian Orser, Canada, and Doug Mattis, USA, followed in second and third, respectively. Mark Mitchell, 1986 U.S. Junior Men's Champion, underlined American strength in this event by placing sixth in figures in his first international meet.

Fedronic faltered slightly in the short, double-footing the triple toe before the double. His marks were a wide range—from 4.4 to 5.5, placing him fifth in short and dropping him to second overall. Orser skated a magnificent short program, completing his first triple Axel, combined with the obligatory double toe, in a short program. He was well rewarded with marks ranging from 5.7 to 5.9 with one 6.0—his first in international competition—and he slipped into the leading position.

Mattis completed a strong triple loop/double toe combination, but stepped off the double Axel landing a bit soon to keep a majority of the judges from deducting three-tenths. The program as a whole was good enough to place him third in the short, and on Fedronic's heels in third overall. Mitchell skated a great short, completing a difficult double toe/triple loop in confident fashion. His marks ranged from 5.2 to 5.5 to gain second in the short, and raise his standing to fourth place overall.

Some hint of the fact that Fedronic might not skate the entire long program circulated before he skated. After a few misses and one bad fall almost two minutes into his program, he decided to withdraw from the competition. He signaled to the referee and walked off the ice.

Orser was not up to the standard of near perfection of the night before in the short program, but his solid overall skating this early in the year, hinted of a very confident season. He did a fine triple Axel, a great triple Lutz, and two good toe loops, but doubled a planned triple flip and Salchow, and turned out of his second triple Axel. He won the long unanimously, and attained the victory overall.

Mattis completed five good triples, and despite falling off the landing of his triple Lutz early on, skated a very poised program. His marks were good enough to move him up to second in the standing overall. Mitchell skated well in the long and performed four triples very well, including a beautiful triple loop-double loop combination. He has marvelous control over his air position, and except missing a triple toe early in the program, he was impressive in his international debut. Placing second in the long, he improved his standing one more place to finish third overall.

LADIES

The American ladies, Cindy Bortz, 1986 U.S. Junior Ladies' Champion, and Tonia Kwiatkowski, 1986 U.S. Junior Ladies fifth, began the Novarat Trophy in fifth and seventh, respectively, after figures. Both coming off strong showings at the 1986 Olympic Festival, these seemingly coy figure placements did relatively little to keep them off the podium. Each skated "hot" short programs with each completing a triple toe/double toe combination with no apparent difficulty. Cindy won, with Tonia in second, and this lifted them to second and fifth respectively. The figure leader, Charlene Wong of Canada, remained in her spot despite placing third in the short due to a double-three on the landing of her double Axel.

Tonia was up to the challenge of pulling into medal territory with the long program. She skated very strongly, including a triple loop, and two triple toes, the second of which, in combination, was uniquely choreographed in her spiral sequence. She has a beautifully lyrical quality to her skating and performs her connecting moves with great care. Her marks ranged from 5.3 to 5.6 to place her second in the long program and third overall.

Wong skated a lovely long program that was fresh and energetic although lacking in technical difficulty (she did not land a triple jump). Her earlier figure lead held her in good stead when combined with her fourth-place free skating performance, and she placed second overall.

Cindy won the long with wonderful confidence for her first international. She included four quality triples: two toe loops, a Salchow, and the difficult Lutz. She was composed and mature and moves with impressive speed at the end of the program. Her marks ranged from 5.4 to 5.7, and she settled comfortably into the top spot for the gold medal.

DANCE

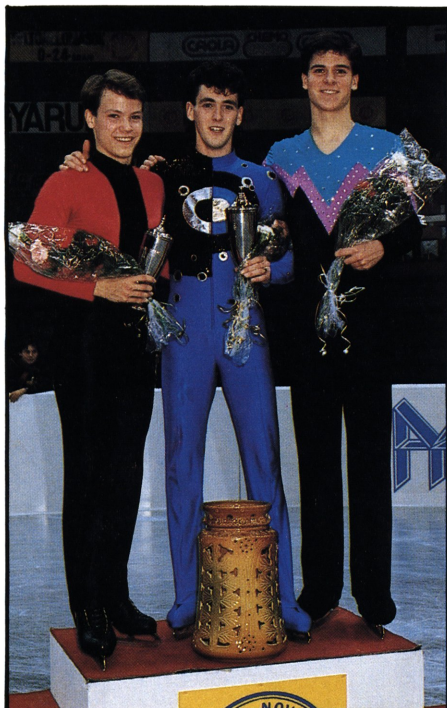

The dance event began with a curtailed compulsory section, as it was decided that only one compulsory dance was to be skated. The dance drawn was the Starlight Waltz, and Tracy Wilson and Robert McCall, Canadian champions and 1986 World bronze medalists, skated with deep-edged movement and well-matched positions. They won the dance, receiving marks ranging from 5.2 to 5.6, and unanimous first-place votes for the judges.

Second place went to Engi and Toth, Hungarian national champions, who skated well and received the margin of four second-place votes. Third place went to the much improved Americans, Susan Wynne and Joseph Druar. They have made a coaching change in the past year, and are evidently reaping the benefits, as they skated this dance with more smooth confidence than in previous years. Their marks ranged from 4.6 to 5.3, including two second-place votes, to place them in third. Fourth place went to Larisa Fedorinova and Evgenis Platow, a very strong Russian team who bear quite a physical resemblance to the World silver medalists, Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomarenko. They have very attractive body lines and skated well to receive marks from 4.5 to 5.1.

The OSP, a Viennese waltz theme, went as expected to Wilson and McCall. Their skating was very light on their feet with the exception of the last half of the second pattern when she caught her blade in his pant leg, and this unsteadied them for a moment. The first pattern of the OSP was skated in exemplary fashion, and the judges placed them firmly in first.

Engi and Toth approached the free dance from a youthful "cuteness" mode, and placed second solidly with music from The Sting. Fedorinova and Platow skated well in the free dance, attempting to capitalize on their balletic presence and patient choreography. The program lacked a significant change in tempo or mood, however, and the team seems a bit young to emote in a mature and realistic fashion. The marks, however, were good enough to keep them in third overall.

Men's singles medalists Doug Mattis, Brian Orser, and Mark Mitchell.

Wynne and Druar presented a very secure free dance with speed and their specialty—fun. They have a wonderful relationship on the ice and refreshingly explored harmonic body language along with matched positions. It's obvious their development has been a shrewd one; none of their energy or obvious love for ice dancing has been clouded. They finished fourth overall.

COMMENT:

Our trip into Hungary will always be a memorable one for those accomplishments attained on the ice, but it was also quite an experience otherwise. For most of us, this was a "maiden voyage" into a communist country (Mrs. DeMore and Joe and Susie had attended the Prize of Moscow News last season), and I can only imagine the difference in lifestyle being all the more dramatic for Mark and Cindy, as this was their first international competition.

We knew this was going to be no ordinary trip from the moment we stepped off the Swiss Air jet in Zurich enroute to Budapest and saw strategically placed men in fatigues holding automatic weapons. (How sad this is necessary.) Customs upon arrival in Budapest were surprisingly simple, and we had our first indication that Hungary was the most western of all eastern-block countries. The bus ride to the hotel from the airport was a bit unnerving. We had heard about how beautiful this city was, set on the picturesque Danube, and yet we passed miles and miles of low income housing reminiscent of barracks. Then someone made the comparison of arriving in America for the first time and taking a stroll through Harlem, and this sobered us quite a bit. When we arrived at the hotel, we realized that the actual city was yet to be seen.

From my own experience in France and Germany the year before, I was accustomed to Europeans understanding a great deal of English. This was not the case with the average citizen in Budapest, and making yourself understood was a constant challenge. Joe ordered pepper one night at dinner, and

by Sally Odekirk

The site of the 1987 U.S. Figure Skating Championships provides an ideal setting for the event in many ways. In addition to the geographical magnificence and cultural riches of the Tacoma-Seattle area, superior venues and accommodations await all visitors.

The championships promise to provide some of the most exciting competitions in several years as our nation's top senior competitors vie for positions in this pre-Olympic year, and junior and novice skaters seek to make their mark in all divisions. With the change of three of the four national titles last year, heated contests are anticipated in the '87 Championships.

The Lakewood Winter Club, your hosts, have been working hard for well over a year to make your stay convenient, comfortable, and memorable. When you land at the Seattle-Tacoma (Sea-Tac) Airport, you will find signs directing you to an information desk located near carousel #10, baggage area. Competitors and some coaches will be transported to the Sheraton Tacoma, while officials and judges will be staying at the Tacoma Dome Quality Inn. Additional housing is available at a number of top quality hotels and motels. Those needing assistance need only call in advance to Thompson Travel 206-627-8221, and the "ice skating desk" will accommodate you in a courteous and efficient manner.

A bus system is set up to provide timely scheduled transportation between the official hotels, spectator hotels, the Tacoma Dome, and the two practice rinks. With a shuttle running every fifteen minutes between the hotels and the Dome, getting to and from competitions promises to be quick and convenient. The buses to the Seattle Center Arena and Sprinker Recreational Center will be scheduled to coincide with the practice sessions at both sites and the figure events at Sprinker. Unlike previous nationals, each bus will have a monitor on board to check for bus passes and provide tighter security. Bus passes will be for sale at the registration desks and the official hotels and are recommended as the least expensive and most convenient transportation means in Tacoma.

While in the Tacoma-Seattle area, there are a few activities unique to the area which shouldn't be missed. Washington State has the most expensive ferry system in the nation, providing a scenic way to get to any of the many islands which dot Puget Sound and serve as a gateway to the Pacific Ocean. Also, be sure to take the time after practicing at the Seattle Center Arena to visit the International Bazaar and the Food Circus, a permanent display of international fast foods and shops set in the grandeur of the Center House just one block away from the Arena.

Check out Seattle's underground city; a preserved portion of nineteenth-century Seattle which was built over following the great Seattle fire of 1889. Also unique to Seattle is its Public Market. The Market is a collection of booths and shops independently operated under one roof. Fresh fish, flowers, and produce are brought in daily with restaurants and bakeries in the market taking full advantage of the fresh food. The Public Market also features shops of many types—from thrift shops to fine furniture, you'll find it in the market.

Then head back to Tacoma for a visit to the newly renovated Point Defiance Zoo and dinner along the Commencement Bay waterfront. All in all you will find your visit to the Tacoma Nationals convenient and scenic. This promises to be one of the most organized nationals ever, so look for the ticket and travel information in this issue of Skating and let us help you make your arrangements to visit the great Pacific Northwest. See you in Tacoma!

The new expansion includes additional gallery and display area on the lower level.

The new Skate Gallery traces the development of the skate over 2,000 years.

A special lower level display honors the 1961 World Team with photographs, costumes, and memorabilia from team members.

Cutting the golden ribbon with skate blades to open the new Museum and Hall of Fame were Charles A. DeMore, project manager; Helen Cataldi, curator; Benjamin T. Wright, chairman Hall of Fame and Museum Committee; William Thayer Tutt, honorary chairman, El Pomar Foundation; and USFSA president, Hugh C. Graham, Jr., M.D.

Hall of Fame and Museum Rededication

A shimmering ice sculpture greeted visitors in the lobby.

On October 11, 1986, the World Figure Skating Hall of Fame and Museum was rededicated in a special ceremony opening the newly expanded facility.

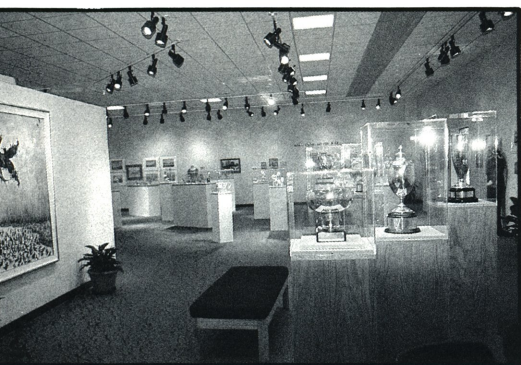

Hugh C. Graham, Jr., M.D., President of the USFSA, spoke of the importance of the facility in his welcoming speech. "A tour of the museum reveals the accomplishments, art, and artistry of our sport. It is not, however, just a collection of dusty relics. It is a working institution. The Museum, now doubled in size, not only serves as a testament to our competitive successes but reflects the strong fabric of American figure skating.

"While I am always pleased to talk about U.S. successes, I must point out that this Museum is a repository for the entire world of figure skating. It not only commemorates our past but provides inspiration for the future."

The World Figure Skating Hall of Fame and Museum, sponsored by the USFSA, was founded in 1965 and has occupied its present permanent home since 1979. In 1984, it was recognized by the International Skating Union (ISU), the governing body of figure skating on ice throughout the world, as serving as such on behalf of the sport as a whole.

The primary purpose of the Museum is to preserve for posterity the heritage and history of the sport, including its fine arts, literature, records, graphics, music, costumes, trophies, medals, and other memorabilia. It does not confine its collection to any particular area of the sport, but rather, seeks to maintain as well as to display to the public, the representative materials from all aspects of the sport and ice skating in general.

Since opening in its permanent location in the USFSA National Headquarters building, the Museum has received many significant collections, either through donation or on permanent or temporary loan for the purpose of exhibition.

As the resources increased, by 1985 the facility soon had outgrown its limited space for exhibition, and applied for a grant for expansion from the El Pomar Foundation of Colorado Springs, which was approved. The lower level of the Museum, which had been used for storage and archives, would be remodeled to use for additional displays and to house the ever-increasing reference library. The expansion would double the size of the Museum from 5,000 to 10,000 square feet.

Bids from contractors were solicited through the offices of architect Carlisle B. Guy, and the bid from Hughes/Smith Construction was accepted in November 1985. Construction began early the following month and was completed in late July 1986. New exhibits were designed and mounted, and the remodeled lower level opened in October.

The principal "jewel" of the Museum, and truly the centerpiece of its displays, is the unique collection "Skating in Art" of Mr. and Mrs. Gillis Grafström. This famous collection has been exhibited throughout the world and can be considered the legacy of and a memorial to one of the truly legendary and greatest champions of all time.

Represented in this collection are works by famous artists such as Pieter Breughel the Elder, Hans Bol, Antione Watteau, Honoré Daumier, Max Beckmann, Louis Icart, and others. The main emphasis of the collection at the outset was graphics. As it grew and diversified, silver, bronze, and porcelain pieces, figurines, painted tiles, plates, sheet music, antique skates and various decorative pieces were added to give the exhibition a special character.

The new Skate Gallery has been opened on the upper level as part of the expansion project. Here, the history of the development of the skate is traced through the ages, beginning with the earliest known bone skates, circa 700 A.D., and continuing to the present. Included are outstanding collections of antique skates from Arthur Goodfellow, donated by the Ice Skating Institute of America, and from Eddie H. Shipstad.

The new lower level galleries can be reached either by stairs or the new elevator. The central core of the lower level is the reference library, complete with couches and work areas. Around this are glass cases displaying the regional and sectional USFSA trophies and some of the international trophies that have been won and now number over 180.

A special exhibit for the opening, and continuing on display for the winter months, honors the memory of the 1961 U.S. World Team. Photographs of team members, costumes, and the medals and memorabilia of the late Dudley Richards and Edward LeMaire are the central focus of the exhibit, along with a copy of the program from the first benefit performance establishing the USFSA Memorial Fund, and a poster from the 25th anniversary exhibition, "Celebration . . . America on Ice"

A highlight of the new gallery is an exhibition of unique memorabilia of Sonja Henie, donated by her former secretary, Dorothy Stevens. Family photographs trace Sonja's early life and amateur triumphs and continue through her brilliant professional film and ice show careers. On display are her boots and skates, the last elaborate show dress made for her, as well as souvenirs from her long career.

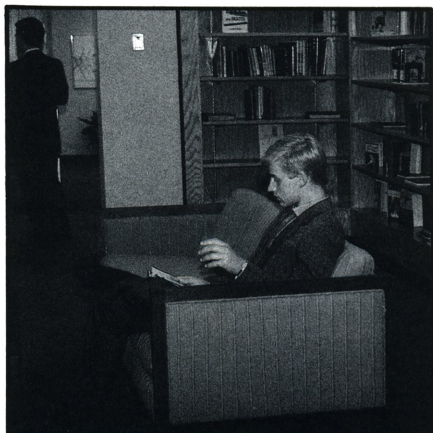

Other special exhibits for the grand opening included a gallery of posters from national, international, world and Olympic events, displays of pins and patches, jewelry, and figurines and porcelains from the Museum collection. Many of the items are now on public display for the first time, and other new exhibits are being planned for the months to come to share additional material from the Museum archives.

The World Figure Skating Hall of Fame now has its own special gallery on the upper level of the remodeled building. Inaugurated in 1975, with the first election of deserving nominees being held in 1976, the Hall of Fame serves to Honor the achievements of persons who have made noteworthy contributions to the sport as a competitor, in a nonamateur capacity, and those who have served in a nonskating capacity to further the development of the sport through services to amateur associations. Elections are held annually. The name, picture, and record of each new member is added to the Hall of Fame gallery dedicated in their honor.

The newly remodeled and expanded World Figure Skating Hall of Fame and Museum, now and for years to come, assures the preservation of the heritage of our sport and the honoring of its major contributors throughout the world. It is a unique museum with priceless artifacts, a repository for precious memorabilia and memories, held in trust for future generations who will continue in the advancement and perpetuation of the sport.

The Museum is open throughout the year, without admission charge, and features constantly changing exhibits and displays. You are cordially invited to visit the Museum when in Colorado, to enjoy the newly expanded facility and its treasures from the world of skating.

Scott Kurttila, a member of the Athletes' Advisory Committee, relaxes in the new lower level library.

Leistner, now in second due to Lebedeva's withdrawal, started out missing her first two triples, but she finished with a triple toe to double toe combination and placed second in the long to win the silver medal.

Damigella, once again skated a beautiful performance with a nice triple Salchow and a gorgeous layback spin to take third in the long program, but just missed winning the bronze medal by .4 of a point.

Conway delivered a clean performance with little technical difficulty, but had nice style and placed fourth in the long to edge out Damigella for third place overall. Szmurlo skated well for her first international, placing fifth in the long and fifth overall.

Pairs

The pair's event with a field of eight, provided the biggest upset in the competition when World Champions, Ekaterina Gordeeva and Sergei Grinkov, who were in the lead after a strong short program performance, just had a "bad day" in the long. Their throw quad twist was successful, but Gordeeva began to falter and fell or missed one disastrous move after another.

Their marks of 5.5 to 5.7 left room for a good performance to beat them for the gold and Canadian champions, Cynthia Coull and Mark Rowsom were up to the challenge, and being in second place, able to do so. Spurred on by a loud, partisan audience who could sense an upset in the making, Coull and Rowsom skated last in the long and performed a confident, clean program with a beautiful throw triple loop and side-by-side double Axels to win the long program and the gold medal.

Natalie and Wayne Seybold, in fifth place going into the long, had to skate a clean program for a medal and did just that, completing a lovely split triple twist and throw triple Salchow to gain the bronze. Meredith Feinberg and Craig Maurizi, the other Americans, skated an elegant program, but finished in seventh place overall.

Dance

Soviet ice dancers, Natalia Annenko and Genrich Sretensky, fourth-place finishers in last season's World Championships, came in to the competition as the favorites to win the event and they did prevail. Their first place never wavered from the compulsory dances through the OSP and the final free dance. For their free, they chose Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet." A good choice for them as it highlights their balletic style and elegant line. Their performance, skated beautifully, brought a standing ovation and marks ranging from 5.4 to 5.8 to win the gold medal.

Showing perhaps a little more diversity and certainly far more intricate footwork, Suzanne Semanick and Scott Gregory, who stood second through all the compulsories, skated a rousing free dance to "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee" and "Duellin' Banjos." They had great speed across the ice despite the difficulty of their footwork and performed several daring maneuvers that had the audience enthralled. They received a standing ovation as well and were awarded the silver medal.

Even though Karyn and Rod Garossino of Canada had a major fall that disrupted their free dance in the middle of their program, they retained their third-place standing over Great Britain's Sharon Jones and Paul Askham.

The French couple, Corinne Paliard and Didier Courtois, served notice that they will be a force to contend with on the international scene in the future with a theatrical performance that showed a nice closeness between the two and good solid footwork.

The other Americans, Dorothy Rodek and Robert Nardozza skated a nice performance to "Rhapsody in Blue" and "I've Got Rhythm," in the free dance, but remained in seventh place for the event.

DRUG USE AND THE "CHEMICAL EDGE" IN SPORTS

by Thomas Kosten, M.D.

The recent tragedies involving drug overdoses by athletes makes the rare use of drugs among figure skaters particularly impressive. Although no sport is immune from "doping," figure skating has had very little history of drug use. This reflects well on our sport and competitors, yet we need to be vigilant and concerned about this issue.

Athletes are highly motivated to succeed, and this motivation can make them more than willing to experiment with a variety of drugs that they believe will improve their performance. The results of these experiments can be sometimes just comical or tragic, as in the deaths of Ken Bias and Don Rogers. When Billie Jean King was a teenage tennis sensation and about to debut at Wimbledon in 1961, she became concerned about an unaccustomed tightness in her tummy. She decided to improve her preparation for the match by taking the first laxative of her life. She took too much and spent most of that night running to the lavatory. This is perhaps a more common experience in trying to develop the "chemical edge" with sports. The athlete is simply left somewhat embarrassed and no better prepared than before using the drug.

This article will review two types of drugs that have been most commonly abused by athletes—stimulants and steroids—and then discuss several options that have been proposed to deal with the problem. One option is urine testing, which has been in place at international competitions for the last fifteen years. However, increased concern about drug use has led to proposals within the Olympic sports community that random urine testing be instituted during training as well as in competitions. This proposal has important implications for all sports including figure skating, and our organization needs to develop informed opinions about this critical issue. This article will be a start in providing the necessary information.

1. Stimulants and getting a "peak performance" Cocaine is the most common stimulant read about in the press lately, but amphetamine is still commonly used in the belief that it will lead to a "peak performance." The lure associated with any stimulant use has been that they increase endurance, strength, and ability to win. Two studies of widely different sports clearly contradict this belief.

At the world weight-lifting championships in 1970, amphetamines were reported to be extensively used by the competitors, and urine testing for these drugs was instituted. During the first week of the competition, eight of the nine lifters who finished in the first three places turned in urine specimens positive for amphetamine. They were all disqualified. During the following week of competition, after these disqualifications were announced, no other specimens contained amphetamine. The lifters expected that performances would substantially decline without the amphetamine, but instead more records were broken in this week of competition than during the first week.

Another example in which stimulants gave absolutely no assistance to the athletes was at a world-class cycling event in the early 1970's. All of the athletes with amphetamine in their urine were losers, and none of the three winners' urines contained this stimulant. The experience of competition shows these "performance enhancers" do not produce successful competitors.

Stimulants may not improve performance for those two sports, but are these results relevant to figure skating? Strength is required for weight lifting and for the triple jumps and complex lifts in figure skating. Endurance is required for cycling and for the several minutes of these jumps and lifts in figure skating programs. In addition, figure skating at its best is done with a smile of confidence and ease.

This magic ingredient of confidence and ease has been another of the elusive qualities that athletes and performers have sought to obtain through stimulants. It is difficult to feel confident when under the pressure of either competition or testing, but the agitation, pounding heart, and racing thoughts produced by stimulants are hardly likely to make a well-trained athlete feel more confident or more at ease. Confidence and ease come from careful concentration on technical skill and on a variety of relaxation exercises that have been developed by psychologists, psychiatrists, and other mental health specialists. Cocaine, amphetamine, and other stimulants simply cloud one's ability to concentrate on what is needed in order to be in relaxed control.

2. Steroids for increasing strength. Anabolic steroids are drugs that have been used to increase strength. These drugs are similar to normal hormones that the body makes and needs, but when taken in large doses to increase muscles, a number of adverse effects occur. These hormones are particularly harmful for young women, because the drugs are more like male hormones. Such steroids disrupt the normal development of a woman; she will become more masculine and can develop acne, increased facial hair (a beard), and an unattractive body shape. Steroids also increase weight, but this increase is often due to fluid retention rather than muscle.

Aside from these adverse effects, there is no evidence that steroids improve performances in any sport including figure skating. Recently, the female athletes on an East German world team were believed to be using these drugs in order to increase their strength. For female figure skaters, the increased emphasis on triple jumps has pushed them to develop more upper body strength. Steroids may seem like an easy way to get this strength. However, specific areas of the body need an increase in strength, and steroids increase the size, strength, and weight of every part of the body.

For finely tuned athletes, exercise programs targeted towards development of specific body areas are needed, rather than the non-specific gain in weight and strength associated with steroids. This undesirable weight gain that steroids produce may account, in part, for the infrequent use of steroids among skaters. However, because of the increased emphasis of strength in our sport and the reported widespread use of steroids in other sports, this drug merits careful monitoring and detailed examination by the members of our organization.

3. Urine testing for drugs in competition and training. Because of the widespread use of stimulants, steroids, and several other classes of drugs in the belief that they will enhance performance, international and national competitions have instituted urine testing. Important and difficult questions have arisen about whether urine testing should also be done during training. Few people think that urine monitoring is a long-range solution to the problem of drug use in sports because it is expensive, difficult to conduct, and an ineffective deterrent to use.

Unless testing is done relatively frequently and randomly during the training season, serious abuse of drugs will not be detected, and any harm to the athlete will not be picked up soon enough. A testing program below the national championship level would also cost more than all the other aspects of organizing a meet combined. Thus, the value of urine monitoring for the relatively infrequent substance abuse that appears to characterize figure skaters seems quite limited.

Educational programs are the only long term solution to drug abuse so that athletes learn that other methods than drugs improve performance with much less risk. An educational program must be built on knowledge of strength, flexibility, cardiovascular conditioning, skating technique, coordination, and mental preparation. Such a program has been started by the USFSA under the Sports Medicine Committee and has already assessed the particular strengths and limitations of our skating competitors. Through these educational and research efforts we hope to was rewarded with Worcestershire sauce, instead. We got used to doing and figuring out a lot of things for ourselves.

The difference in food was the most disturbing for our team. I, for one, am far too in love with the act of eating to be turned off by a somewhat questionable, unattractive, and unidentifiable morsel placed before me. The balance of the team, however, abstained from most dishes the first two days, and we all laughed when Cindy took pictures of the food, saying, "My Mom's never gonna believe this one!" We all adjusted to what we knew we would eat and survive, but there was a lot of bread and butter in between!

We reveled in the lower cost of living. Food was less expensive (Tonia and I spent about a dollar on a hamburger, fries, and a Coke), sweaters were about $20, and merchandise was pretty cheap (I bought four Walkman batteries for just under $1.50). There was plenty of Russian merchandise for good prices, and most of the European skaters vouched for its workmanship. The popular shopping district in the city was actually very western, and we had a great time walking around, enjoying the gorgeous architecture, and just people watching.

The city is absolutely beautiful, and I don't think any one of us realized to what extent until we went on the bus tour on Sunday. The incredible churches and buildings set right on the banks of the Danube were a feast for our cameras. The castle district with its mammoth walls and town center inside was a sight to see. There was even a great disco in there that all of us went to one night. The kids in the disco were all pretty friendly, and it was fun to listen to them singing American Top 40 songs even though they probably didn't understand a word of what they were saying.

It was a very special week, and all of us grew close, in a family-like way. We'll never forget times like the eighty-mile-per-hour cab ride that included a detour through a train station parking lot (much to the alarm of pedestrians who had to throw themselves out of the way); Susie asking the cab driver how to pronounce the word csemege (it comes out "cha'meggie"), and then using that word when at a loss for others ("Are you gonna eat that . . . that . . . chameggie?); and little sayings, like, "O-RAMA!" and "My hair is doing a total Phyllis Diller!" It was a lot of laughs and good times and some fine skating. That, combined with the city, makes it one place I'd like to visit again.

U.S. FIGURE SKATING CHAMPIONSHIPS

'87 Nationals OFFICIAL SOUVENIRS

You'll find the official souvenirs of the '87 Nationals are carefully and thoughtfully designed with you in mind. "Goosey" can't wait to be cuddled by you and yours. This bright yellow duck is soft and lovable—identical to the real "Goosey" who will skate into your hearts.

The poster promises to be a memento always to be treasured, a replica of a painting by Jack Olson, whose Boeving designs hang in the Smithsonian. Olson captures magnificent Mount Rainier, the Tacoma Dome and a pair of skaters in a scene which will dazzle one and all.

Other novelty items are equally appealing and the apparel is tasteful and practical, mostly white with green and blue logo designs of the smartest and latest styles. The youth T-shirts are an exception. They are in colors with "Goosey's" likeness to brighten the surroundings.

If you can't wait to see them, then buy them right now!

Loeser on Music

The existing system facilitates judging at skating's expense. The coaches and choreographers who are responsible for what the skaters perform on the ice have figured the numbers game out. First place does not necessarily mean the most artistic; it is the most checks with the least number of deductions. The artistic merit title of the second set of marks given out by the judges is a mockery. It is only a slight variation of the first technical mark and, even then, only another set of numbers that allows for greater flexibility in slotting performances. In the end what ascends is what is most accountable.

In this fervor to tabulate, music has become merely functional. Currently its prime function, particularly in the singles' events, is to mark the beginning and end of a technical display.
