NEWS BRIEFS

Ever try skating on a moving ice surface? How about skating on a moving surface, turning a corner and going down hill? That's exactly what Christopher Bowman, Lori Blasko, Todd Sand, and Natalie Brooks did as performers on a float in the 100th anniversary Rose Bowl Parade in Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Sponsored by Home Savings and Loan, also celebrating its 100th birthday, the float was called "Holiday House Warming." Designed as an old-fashioned winter scene, it was complete with a two-story Victorian house and a real pond of one ton of ice. The float was made out of everything natural: sweet rice, corn husks, pink and red roses, carnations, statice, iris, mums, and orchids. Special guest on the float, seated in a sleigh, was 104-year-old Lottie Hicks. The skaters were a great success in literally taking their show on the road.

Turner Broadcasting has announced that it will carry highlights of three international competitions on a new series "U.S. Olympic Gold." The tentative schedule calls for the program to air 6:05 to 7:05 EST. Skate Canada will be seen on January 14, The Lalique Trophy from Paris on January 21, and NHK Trophy from Japan on February 4. Check local listing for stations and times.

From all accounts, The NutraSweet World Professional Figure Skating Championships in Landover, Maryland, were a great success. Final results saw Brian Boitano winning the Men's division with Scott Hamilton in second; Brian Orser, third, and Robin Cousins, fourth. Debi Thomas won the Ladies' professional title, topping rivals Rosalynn Sumners, second; Denise Biellmann, third; Dorothy Hamill, fourth; and Elaine Zayak, fifth. Underhill and Martini won the Pair event, followed by Kitty and Peter Carruthers, Lea Ann Miller and Bill Fauver, with Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard in fourth. Judy Blumberg and Michael Seibert took the dance event over Tracy Wilson and Rob McCall. Six of the skaters were making their professional competitive debut. The competition will be aired on NBC on January 15 and 29.

The NutraSweet World Challenge of Champions from Paris, featuring most of the same people, will be seen on January 7, February 4, and March 18 on ABC. Check local times.

The 1989 U.S. Olympic Festival will be held in Oklahoma City, with skating events at the spacious downtown Myriad Center on Saturday and Sunday, July 22 and 23. The format will return to straight competition rather than the team concept used last year.

Men and ladies will skate Original and Long programs (no figures), and Dance will consist of two compulsories and a free dance (no OSP). The tentative schedule calls for Pair's and Ladies' Original Programs on Saturday afternoon, followed by the Men's Original Program and Dance Compulsories Saturday night. Ladies' and Pair's Long Programs will be skated Sunday afternoon with Free Dance and Men's Long Programs on Sunday evening. Competitors will be housed at Oklahoma University, and invitations to competitors will be extended following the National Championships in Baltimore.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

As we begin the new year and prepare for the 1989 National Championships in Baltimore, it is a time for reflection and also one for projection. This year will be the 72nd United States Figure Skating Championships, and I anticipate another excellent and successful event.

The past year has been an important one for our sport with outstanding performances by our international, World, and Olympic Teams. Our skaters were responsible for bringing home fifty percent of the medals won by the United States at the Olympic Winter Games in Calgary and were dominant on the international scene. Exposure in the print and television medias have heightened public awareness of figure skating and offered us a potential upon which to capitalize. But we cannot rest on our laurels.

These last few years have been a time of rapid change for all sports. Figure skating has been no exception. The USFSA has moved from its traditional insular position of narrowly looking at and governing our sport, to a broader perception of how we can develop grass roots participation for rinks and clubs with programs such as "Skate With U.S." and The NutraSweet National Ice Skating Month. This latter program in its second year is a $200,000 nationwide effort to get people into the ice rinks. I am delighted that the ISIA and PSGA have joined with co-sponsors NutraSweet and the USFSA to make this such a success. We continue to study and move in a variety of other ways to broaden our participation, influence, and governance as we enter the last decade of this century.

Of course, the greatest shock to the skating community was the International Skating Union's decision to drop figures from World and World Junior competitions after 1990. Only four countries—including the United States—opposed this change at the ISU Congress, June 8 to 10, 1988. And I can assure you, it will not be reversed.

Many of you have seen or heard of our plans to have a "two track system"—one for figures and one for free skating. Both events would qualify through Regionals and Sectionals to Nationals, however, only the free skating events would lead competitors to international, World, and Olympic competitions.

This will keep figures as a separate optional competition, not linked to free skating and original programs. Thus, skaters could compete in both events or either separately. Those skaters particularly good at figures could advance to Sectionals and on to Nationals. This offers more opportunity for more medals and more skaters progressing to each level. What I have come to call the "Happiness Factor" should rise measurably.

There has been great resistance to this change by traditionalists, especially some in the coaching ranks. However, if figures are as essential as some would have us believe, then surely they should flourish on their own.

Many push the concept that the quality of edges and turns will diminish for dance and pairs as well as free skaters, if figures are not used as early building blocks. I must point out, however, a little known fact about the development of competitive skaters in the USSR. Ice rinks, ice time, and patch time are at a premium in Russia. They do not allow any skater to do figure until age 12 or 13, when they show promise of going on in single skating into the international forum.

Pairs and dance branch off to concentrate in their specialties without ever doing figures. There are very few who can say that Russian dancers and pairs have suffered from lack of figures. Their dominance in these areas is obvious.

It is also clear that the USSR, Europe, and Japan will not require any figures for their skaters. We must not impede and, indeed to fulfill our U.S. Olympic Committee charge, cannot impede the progression of our best free skaters into the international forum by requiring figures.

For the U.S. competitive skater, and even perhaps more important the beginning skater, the cost of skating should decrease fifty to sixty percent. At the upper competitive levels, it will still be expensive, but the current $25,000 to $30,000 costs can be greatly reduced.

With this decrease in costs, participation in our sport should greatly increase and makeup for the possible monetary loss of figures to rinks and professionals. Rinks, clubs, and coaches must raise their heads from the sand and work with us to develop this increased participation and join in this new age of figure skating.

—Hugh C. Graham, Jr., M.D.
President, USFSA

Dr. Graham was a skater in his youth, competing in Singles and Pairs and represented the U.S. in the World Championships in both events. He has served as Team Leader for the Worlds and Olympics, has judged the Worlds and Olympics, is a World Referee, and was a consultant to President Ford's Commission on Olympic Sports. He graduated from Harvard College, received his M.D. from the University of Chicago and did his postgraduate medical studies at the University of Oklahoma, where he now serves as an Associate Clinical Professor of Pediatrics. He has been USFSA President since May 1986.

ADULT LADIES

striving to make their goals

by Deb Vestal

In most competitions, there is little agreement on what age denotes an Adult Lady. Some set a minimum age of 19, others age 25, and still others age 30. But there is agreement that an adult lady loves freestyle more than any other form of skating and showing it off in competition is in her blood.

Adult ladies are very self-driven, goal-oriented individualists intent on passing the next test or achieving a certain freestyle level. Very rarely has the lady tried dance, and if she has, passing the bronze level can be a supreme effort. And if dance is pursued, her interest may lie more in competing in solo dance rather than with a partner. More often than choosing dance, the adult lady may choose pair skating, but just briefly, since a man of the same age usually prefers a much younger, much lighter partner.

The desire to skate and compete comes from deep within the adult lady. Terrie Stockemer of Thousand Oaks, California, states, "Skating is not only excellent physical and mental therapy, but it is a release from tension. Being an artist with a music and dance background, I can combine it all in my skating and be creative on the ice."

Roberta Flygare of Salt Lake City looks at skating as a new challenge. "I was a ski racer, but I was looking for something to do in the afternoons without making a full day expedition out of it. I also play the piano and like the idea of a sport that lets me combine my two interests of being an athlete and being musical at the same time."

For Terry Kerth of Sacramento, California, skating has always been in her life. "I have been skating since I was two years old, and I have never really stopped and don't intend to. I really love my skating. Nancy Horton of San Francisco has no plans to stop. "Skating for me is the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat. It's the competition, the excitement, the whole thing. It's watching yourself grow and, like everyone else, I just got hooked." Donna Fountain of Santa Clara, California, skates "for the happy feeling I get," and for Melinda Hopper of St. Joseph, Missouri, "I hate exercising. There's too much standing around, but skating is just so much fun."

For some, skating is an accomplishment and achievement. Deborah York of Kansas City says, "I have always been athletic, swimming and playing tennis in high school. Skating is something I can achieve and draw from my talent." Mary Scott of Denver like the accomplishment. "I like to have something challenging that is just beyond my reach and then achieving the satisfaction of working long and hard to get it."

Skating at an adult age does have its share of problems. Muscles do not respond as fast. The mind thinks longer and more analytically. Each person also has a full life besides skating.

Gena Ritchie of Aspen, Colorado, admits "Finding the time to do it with my personal life, working, and skiing is the hardest for me." Mary Jo Spellman of Kansas City agrees, "Arranging my schedule is the hardest part and I am out there (skating) thinking about who's going to pick up my kid, if the laundry's done, and whether the kid did his homework." Dorothy Bowers of Salt Lake City feels, "I would like to do the things that you need to do to be in condition and enhance your skating. It is frustrating to me to know that I could do a lot better if I had the time."

For some adult ladies, coordinating body and mind is a problem. "For me, it is the frustration of knowing what needs to be done but my body won't do it," states Maureen Meier of Chicago. "I can see it in my mind, but I have no concept of what my body is doing. Also it takes adults so long to do anything."

Medina Brown of Hayward, California, agrees. "The hardest part is when you know you can do something like I would like to do double jumps. They just take me so long. The hard part is waiting for it to come and then there is more waiting for it to come in competition."

Consistency and patience are also a problem with Flygare. "I have trouble maintaining a positive attitude. I can learn something and the next day I expect it to be one-hundred percent there one-hundred percent of the time. I get horribly mad at myself." The same difficulty is seen by Carolyn Dow of Lincoln, Nebraska. "I think it is hard to get the perfection of each thing. I don't want to just do things; I want to do them well."

The hardest part for some just may be finding a place to skate and getting to the rink. In Metairie, Louisiana, Sherry Reed helplessly watched as her rink closed. Dow lives in a town that has no ice rink and her commute each way is an hour and a half.

Despite the hardships, goals are always in the mind of adult ladies. Nothing is out of reach. Fountain, who recently passed her junior freestyle wants to pass her fourth figure test. Scott would like to work her way completely through the test structure. "I am on my third test now. As soon as I get that and a double Salchow that is not ying-yang, I will take my intermediate and move out of adult ladies and into intermediate ladies. I know the kids are doing double Axels at that level, but I have high goals."

"I have passed my third figure and am working on my fourth," says Charlotte Candida of San Francisco. "I just want to do everything the best I can." Hopper has similar goals. "I want to work on my second test and also my freestyle. The second test is my ultimate goal, but I may not get too much farther. I want to slowly work my way along."

For others, there is not a specific test to be passed but a personal goal. "I would like to be able to learn to perform my program and sell it to the audience," admits Karen Sanchez of Los Angeles. "I would like to be relaxed and comfortable with

Judges

FORUM

I Have a Decision to Make

by Ann Fauver

All through life we find it necessary to make decisions. Simple ones, such as, "What should I cook for dinner tonight? Should I wear a dress to the meeting or would a skirt and sweater be more appropriate?" There's nothing earth-shattering about making those decisions, however, as adults we face more complicated and multi-faceted decisions which affect many phases of our lives and those of our family, and we become adept at handling personal decision making.

For those of us who become figure skating judges, in order to perform those duties, we are volunteering, no less, to make additional decisions, subjective ones at that, in a sport that is constantly developing and changing. Ours is not the case of ascertaining who crossed the finish line first, but of rendering our opinion based on training and knowledge which selects the winner.

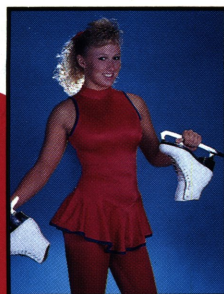

Have you ever wondered about these individuals designated as "judges," and how they make multiple subjective decisions within a short span of time, and yet seem to handle their psyche? How do they approach this duty for which they have volunteered? Are they confident of the subject matter? Do they ever have doubts? Do judges become nervous or tense as an event goes on? In brief, every one of them is a human being capable of all of the above emotions, but, each has his/her "secret" concerning the "how to" of judging.

This article is written especially for anyone who has never experienced the role of "figure skating judge," and for those skaters who have been, or will be, judged in some phase of this sport at one time or another.

Beyond the school and trial work required of all judges before receiving an appoint-

GETTING AROUND AT

by Bill Howard

The city of Baltimore will be an "eye opener" to many who have not been there in some time, or who by-pass it on trips up and down the East coast. It is an attractive and dynamic place and those attending the '89 Nationals will be right in the heart of it.

Getting There

For a city its size (twelfth largest in the U.S.), Baltimore is a deceptively easy city for arrivals by air, rail, or automobile.

Baltimore/Washington International Airport (BWI) has a new modern and "friendly" terminal that hosts arrivals from all over the nation and all over the world. A quick 10 miles from downtown by expressways, BWI has airport limo service every 20 minutes at a cost of $10.00 to downtown hotels and taxis which make the run for $12 to $14.

A major city on the busy AMTRAK northeast corridor, Baltimore is well-served by frequent trains from Boston, New York, and other northern points as well as by trains from the south.

For those driving to the Nationals, the Interstate highways practically "dump" you into the center of the city. Motorists arriving from the west via I-70 or I-83 merely have to follow signs to "Downtown" or the "Ft. McHenry Tunnel." The same applies to drivers coming up I-95 from the south.

However, do not go through the tunnel but take Exit 53 "Downtown" just before the last turn off prior to the tunnel. This exit takes you onto I-395 right into town. Follow signs that say "Inner Harbor" and take a right turn onto Conway Street. Then turn right at the light on Charles Street and go up Charles to the hotels. Those driving from Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York via I-95 go through the Ft. McHenry Tunnel and just after exiting the tunnel take Exit 53 into downtown.

If you get hopelessly lost, just ask how to get to "Inner Harbor" and you will be close.

Local Transportation

The hotels being used for the competition are all close to the Baltimore Arena and just a short walk away even in inclement weather.

Arrangements are being made for special "Trolley Car" buses to ferry competitors, coaches, and chaperones from the downtown hotels and Arena to the two suburban rinks being used for some events—the Mt. Pleasant Ice Arena and the Northwest Ice Rink. In addition, there will be special charter buses provided to take spectators and others not entitled to ride the Trolley to and from suburban ice rinks. These will leave from a location near the hotels and the Arena. Schedules and other details will be available at check-in.

All in all, the site for the 1989 U.S. Figure Skating Championships presents no problems as far as getting to and from major events since the hotels and Arena are all in the same area.

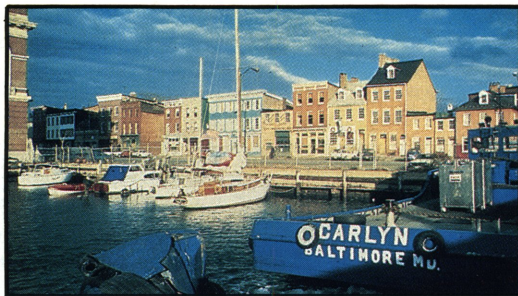

Housing

The Omni International and the Lord Baltimore-Raddison are the two official hotels for the '89 Nationals housing competitors and judges, just a hop and a skip to the Arena.

Other nearby hotels being used for the competition include The Baltimore Marriott, the Days Inn (across the street from the Arena), Sheraton Inner Harbor, Stouffer Harbor Place, and the Tremont Plaza. Persons needing rooms, at special '89 Nationals rates may make arrangements through Roeder Travel by calling the "Skating Desk" (301) 677-6090.

Food

A previous article in the November 1988 issue of Skating highlighted the attractions of Baltimore and detailed some of the more popular locations for ethnic dishes as well as Baltimore's staple, seafood. To add to that here are a few recommendations based on the experience of Baltimore and Washington D.C. restaurant goers. Since Nationals are being held in February and the weather will most likely be cold and could be disagreeable, these tips are based on the location of places nearest the Arena and downtown hotels.

First, the official hotels, the Omni and the Lord Baltimore, are making special arrangements to have food available when skaters, coaches, and chaperones need it. This means there will be special "Express" arrangements for early morning breakfasts as well as buffets available between afternoon and evening skating times. These will most likely be in special areas of the hotel so skaters do not have to wait in line outside a coffee shop or restaurant.

All of the hotels being used for the Nationals offer good food, some even excellent, so if it just happens to be cold and sleeting, you can still be certain of eating well right in your hotel. However, here are some recommendations of places that will be within easy walking distance of the Arena and the major hotels.

It has been said that there are three reasons to visit Baltimore, food, food, and food!

The Lexington Market, just a short two blocks from the Arena has been Baltimore's pantry since 1782 and offers a mind-boggling array. There are some 500 merchants in the market, three major department stores, dozens of one-of-a-kind shops, and food specialties from some 130 suppliers. Many are stand up affairs, but others have seating.

At the Lexington Market one can spoon up fresh oyster stew or a soft crab sandwich or choose Polish or German sausages, souvlaki, or Carolina minced barbeque. One gourmand claims to have had the best sausage and hash-browned potatoes at a stand in the market. The Lexington Market ranks with Boston's Haymarket, the L.A. Farmers Market, and Seattle's Pike Place Market. The noted writer Andries de Groot goes so far as to claim the Lexington Market in Baltimore is the closest thing to the old Les Halles in Paris. Now that's praise. The market is open Monday through Saturday from 8:30 A.M. to 6:00 P.M.

P.J. Crickett's, just south of the Arena at 206 W. Pratt Street, is said to be the place for ribs, with more than 15 kinds. Also nearby is the Cinnabar (Chinese) in the Convention Center Mall; Tugs, in the Tremont Plaza Hotel at 22 St. Paul Plaza; and the Trellis Garden in the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

There is a fine Spanish (not Mexican) restaurant, Tio Pepe's, at 10 E. Franklin Street a few blocks from the hotels. This has long been a popular hangout for advertising and media people.

Nearby at 413 N. Charles Street is Kawasaki for those who like Japanese cuisine. Of special interest to skaters and other late hour folks is the Buttery at 513 N. Charles St. which is open 24 hours. In fact all of Charles Street is considered one of Baltimore's "Restaurant Rows."

If a person gets the "hungry" and is tired of hotel room service and does not want to get dressed for the outside, there are two places that deliver to major hotels. They are Uncle Lee's Harbor for Chinese food and Piccadillo's for pizza.

If you are in an expansive mood, celebrating a winning event, or the lottery, you can indulge in a touch of luxury and visit the new Harbor Court Hotel. This is a true luxury hotel and contains only 203 rooms and suites but boasts "Hamptons" a four-star restaurant. It is just yards away from the old sailing ships in the harbor and if you want a preview—look in the August 1988 issue of Architectural Digest.

A true Baltimore institution, though it will require a cab ride, is Haussner's Restaurant at 3236 Eastern Avenue. Not only is it a cab ride, but they do not take reservations. Open Tuesdays through Saturdays 11:00 A.M. to 11:00 P.M., it was established in 1926 and the menu lists 50 meat items alone and has its own wonderful bakery on the premises. It also boasts an impressive art collection which diners are urged to stroll around and enjoy.

Another taste sensation that visitors to Baltimore will not want to miss is the world famous "Little Italy." Comprised of over 15 of the finest Italian restaurants, "Little Italy" offers diners choices of both northern and southern Italian cuisines.

Special Events

The Draw Party will be held Saturday, February 4, at the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Sunday, February 5, will be the first day of practice for competitors, and the Judges' Party will be held on Monday evening, February 6, at the Baltimore Country Club.

Tuesday, February 7, will be the first day of competition. The Competitors Party will take place on Saturday, February 11, at the Omni International Hotel from 10:30 P.M. to 3:00 A.M. As a major corporate sponsor of the '89 Nationals, Omni Hotels will host a party that promises to be memorable.

Music, Music, Music

A special feature of the 1989 Nationals will be the control of all music from one central location to the three skating sites.

The music room in the Baltimore Arena will literally be a broadcast studio feeding music and announcements to the Arena, the Northwest Ice Rink, and the Mt. Pleasant Ice Arena over high quality broadcast telephone lines. In all there will be well over 200 hours of music and announcements originating from the central "studio" beneath the Baltimore Arena!

Exhibition of Champions

At the 1989 Nationals there will be a departure in the usual scheduling of the Exhibition of Champions.

The Exhibition of Champions will be held on Sunday evening rather than on Sunday afternoon as has been customary in the past. Two live broadcasts on Saturday and Sunday by ABC television, have made it necessary to schedule the exhibition for 7:30 P.M. on Sunday evening, February 12.

Baltimore Beckons

The City by the Bay provides many special sightseeing opportunities during those free times between events. Baltimore City is only a 45-minute drive to our Nation's Capital. While in Washington, visitors may tour the Smithsonian, the National Gallery, Georgetown, and the hundreds of national historical monuments. No trip to the Baltimore/Washington corridor would be complete without seeing the hub of our nation's government.

The Baltimore Figure Skating Club and the Washington Figure Skating Club have been working diligently to make the 1989 Nationals one of the best and one of the most enjoyable for all.

One last word—don't leave town without trying Maryland Crab Cakes!

SPORTS MEDICINE & SCIENCE OUTREACH PROGRAM

Outreach participants attend lecture by USOC Research Assistants David T. Martin and Toni Denahan.

Each year in October and May, the USFSA and the U.S. Olympic Committee join forces to conduct two Sports Science Development Camps at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs. The twenty elite skaters selected to participate in these camps undergo a battery of tests to examine balance, strength, power, vertical jumping ability, endurance, foot shape, boot fit, nutrition, psychology, physiology, and much more.

Using the results of these tests, the medical and scientific staffs at the camps can identify anything from a deficiency in an athlete's diet to an error in a skater's triple Lutz, things which might have otherwise taken the skaters and their coaches years to uncover. The advancements made at the five camps held so far have been remarkable, and for the select skaters and coaches lucky enough to have participated, the knowledge gained has been invaluable.

Inspired by the success of these camps, members of the USFSA Sports Medicine Committee set out to find a way to give skaters of all levels, from all parts of the country a chance to participate in similar programs. Under the leadership of Dr. Howard Silby, Chairman of the Sports Medicine Committee, Dr. Lester Cramer organized the first Sports Science and Development Outreach Program held November 6 to 10 at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs.

The goal of the four-day Outreach camp was to teach participants how to set up a local diagnostic skating program, modeled after the USFSA/USOC development camps, at their home clubs, to enable skaters at the grass roots level to have the same advantages as the elite skaters who had participated in each of the development camps. Fourteen USFSA Clubs from across the country sent teams consisting of physicians, nutritionists, psychologists, club administrators, coaches, and scientists to participate in one full day of lectures and two days of "hands on" clinics.

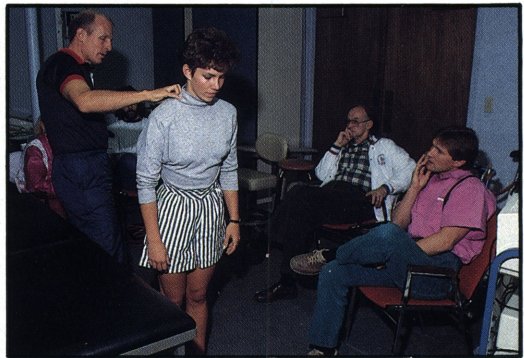

The 86 delegates were divided according to profession into groups of six to eight people. These groups then rotated through nine different clinics focusing on nutrition, free weight training, plyometrics (use of small trampolines and various balancing boards for increasing strength), physiology, film analysis, video analysis, orthopedics, psychology, and on-ice physiology testing. This process enabled all of the participants to understand what each scientific program was about, giving them a clearer understanding of the bigger picture.

Funded by a grant from the Olympic Foundation, the Outreach Program boasted an impressive faculty consisting of full-time scientists from the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, along with volunteer physicians from the USFSA's Sports Medicine Committee. Invited participants included: Roy Cofer, Ralph Requa, Donna Burden, Jessica Gaynor, and Sue Stricklin from the Central California Interclub Association; Cathy Owen, Cathy Hartley, Rose Smith, Don Smith, Ed Larson, and Carla Phenicie from the University of Cincinnati and the Queen City FSC; Sue Luria, Jackie Miles, Don Schuele, Don Goodfellow, and Charles Allen from the Cleveland SC, Pam Robinson, Pieter Kollen, Ann Healy, Polly Nicely, Melanie Sanders, Marge Albohm, and Paula Ziegler from the Indiana/World Skating Academy; Dorothy Jamison, Roger Zabik, Mary Dawson, Quinter Burnett, and Joy Griffin from the Kalamazoo FSC; Bette Snuggerud, Ted Engelking, Jamie Hornbrook, Peggy Naas, and Kathleen Avila from the Twin Cities FSA; Mary Lou Almo, Sherri Chafin, Robert Robertson, Ray Burdett, Paul Fadel, James Irrgang, and Jere Gallagher from the Pittsburgh FSC; June Sidman, Susan Ceci, Howard Saunders, Stephen Press, Garry Sherman, Jim Crawford, Tom Lescinski, and Dale Weber from the SC of Rockland; Nancy Bevan, Joan Bellessa, Damon Delistraty, John Bevan, Edward Reisman, Duffy Ready, and Scott Pritchard from the Lilac City FSC; Jerry Sisson, Debbie Howe, Harold Glad, Brad Binnington, Bill Jennings, Denise Fondren, and Debra Paino from the Creve Coeur FSC; Cynthia Bainbridge, Jane Miner, and Joan Benson from the University of Utah; Margaret Badgely, Lorraine Borman, Robert Wills, Craig Garver, Myron Recob, Dale Blair, Glen Frese, and Carol Schrader from the Wenatchee FSC; Carole Schulman, Bill Bardsley, Michael Stuart, Barbara Keefe, and Anysley Smith from the Rochester FSC; George Le Masters, Darlene Ward, David Feiring, Eli Krigsten, Todd Ellenbecker, John Neel, and Jeffrey Harrison from the Arizona FSC.

The USFSA Outreach Program was a great success in terms of achieving its goals of educating people on how to establish their own diagnostic skating programs. But according to Dr. Silby, "Its true success will be measured by how many of the participating groups go back home and actually set up such a program. If even one program is started, then we have been successful in our goal of helping skaters in the U.S. reach their potential as quickly as possible, without injury."

SKATE CANADA '88

by Peter Robinson

The only thing that safely can be predicted about any figure skating competition is that it will be unpredictable. So it proved at this year's Skate Canada, held for the first time in the city of Thunder Bay in northwestern Ontario, a very friendly and hospitable host city. The enthusiastic capacity audiences urged the skaters to give their best, and for all of its typical ups and downs the event was a considerable success.

Ladies

The first division of the competition to conclude was the ladies' event, and with it came the first upset. Jill Trenary of the United States, fourth at the Calgary Olympic Winter Games and fifth at the 1988 Worlds, was a strong favorite. However, the first compulsory figure, the counter, produced a virtual photo-finish between Trenary, Charlene Wong of Canada, and Natalia Lebedeva of the Soviet Union, with Wong just edging the others for first. Then Trenary executed what was clearly the best paragraph loop to capture first place in figures, with Lebedeva second and Wong third. Gina Fulton of Great Britain was a surprising fourth, followed by Patricia Neske of the Federal Republic of Germany. Tracey Damigella of the U.S. finished sixth.

The new original program helped sort things out. Damigella seemingly paid the price for having to skate first, for despite a clean performance she was only placed sixth. Like the majority of the ladies, her combination was triple toe loop/double toe loop and the solo double jump was the flip.

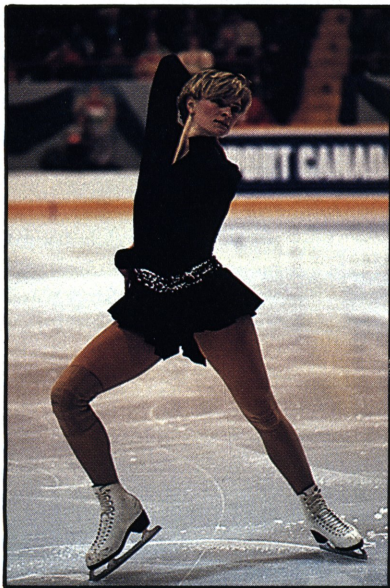

First of the top group to perform was Lebedeva. She over-rotated her triple toe loop in a program that the judges ranked anywhere from second to seventh. Nevertheless, it was good enough for a second place in this portion of the competition. Neske successfully completed all eight elements and showed considerable improvement in presentation. She was followed by Wong who, after performing a beautiful, high double Axel, mislanded a second one in the combination. Her presentation, "Fan Tan Fanny" by Rogers and Hammerstein, was easily the best up to that point, and her second set of marks brought her a tie with Neske for third. Fulton, after a bad warm-up, put herself out of contention by completely opening up what was presumably intended to be a triple Salchow in the combination and falling on the double Axel.

Last to skate was Trenary, whose original program was clearly in a class by itself. Although visibly tense, she successfully completed her triple toe loop/double toe loop combination and had no trouble with the double Axel or double flip. At that point she seemed to relax and enjoy the rest of her program, and as the music changed to David Foster's theme from the Calgary Olympics, she performed an outstanding circular step sequence that was the best of the event. Marks gave her a unanimous first place and first overall. Lebedeva was second with a mathematical chance to win.

In the long program, Wong was the first of the top flight to skate. Although she had trouble with her two triples, a toe loop and a loop, once again she demonstrated her beautiful double Axel and her musical sensitivity. Fifth place in the free skating gave her fourth overall. Damigella, despite minor problems, landed three triples, a toe loop and two Salchows. She placed fourth in the free and fifth in the final results.

Then came Trenary. Skating to mostly the same music as last year, she began strongly with a fine combination spin and a split jump/triple toe loop. However, on her trademark move, the one-foot Axel/triple Salchow combination, she fell heavily. A Bauer to be followed by a double Axel was instead succeeded by only a waltz jump. She came back with a solid triple Salchow and finished well. Her strong artistic impression placed her first at this point, but the door was definitely open.

She was followed by Neske, who skated what must have been a personal best. In a strong technical display, she landed four very good triples. Once again, she confirmed the favorable impression of her artistic improvement and was the choice for the bronze medal. At her last appearance at Skate Canada in 1985, Neske also took the bronze, finishing behind Caryn Kadavy and Elizabeth Manley.

Last to take to the ice was Lebedeva, the only skater with a chance to catch Trenary. Had it been planned, it couldn't have made for better drama. Skating to selections from Swan Lake, she too gave a personal best performance. She executed the same four triples as Neske, two toe loops and two Salchows, with one of each done in combination with a double toe loop. Gliding through all of her moves with confidence and conviction, she won the first-place votes of five of the seven judges. First place in the free gave her the gold medal, with Trenary receiving the silver. It was especially sweet for Lebedeva; at her last appearance at Skate Canada in 1986, she fell so badly in the long program that she was forced to withdraw. Clearly, this year her luck had turned for the better.

Pairs

Unlike the ladies' event, there was no clear favorite among the pairs. Any one of four teams reasonably might have a chance for the gold. The original program brought a high level of technical ability and artistic creativity, with many variations in the approaches to the death spirals, overhead lifts, spiral sequences, and other elements.

First of the top pairs to skate was a relatively new and very youthful Soviet team, Ekaterina Murugova and Artem Torgashov, followed with a clean powerful performance. Among its highlights were a delayed double twist lift, perfect side-by-side double Axels and a fine forward inside death spiral.

Canadians Isabelle Brasseur and Lloyd Eisler gave a very enjoyable performance that was a witty and humorous battle of the sexes set to excerpts from the Broadway musical, They're Playing My Song. The double twist was superb, with so much height that Brasseur had time to clap her hands over her head on a beat of music before landing. The individual spins were remarkably well synchronized for a couple so disparate in size (she is four feet eleven inches to his five feet eleven inches), as were the side-by-side double Lutzes. More than any of the other couples, they gave a real performance, rather than just executing a collection of elements.

The German Democratic Republic's Peggy Schwarz and Alexander Koenig did a pair of fine double Axels, and the flip out exit from their overhead lift brought a gasp from the audience, but their double twist was quite standard and they didn't take full advantage of the creativity the original program allows.

The final performers were Americans Natalie and Wayne Seybold. Against rousing music from Candide, their double twist was done in a lateral position and they finished with their trademark distinctive entry into a back outside death spiral. However, their individual jumps were only double flips. The original program concluded with Brasseur and Eisler first, followed by Murugova and Torgashov, Schwarz and Koenig, and the Seybolds in fourth.

Unfortunately, the general high standard of the original program did not carry over to the free skating, where all the pairs were below their best. Schwarz and Koenig had trouble with their solo jumps; he tripped at the beginning of the step sequence; and he never really attained the pivot position in the death spiral. They had no trouble with the throw jumps, a double Axel and a triple Salchow, or with any of their lifts.

Skating to Russian themes, the Seybolds had trouble with the throw triple Salchow, the individual double Axels, and the throw triple loop. A triple twist, a pair of death spirals, and a lateral twist were among the strong points of their program.

Brasseur and Eisler opened with a very high split triple twist and did an interesting forward inside death spiral with his pivot in a cross-legged position. They had no problems with the throw jumps, triple toe and Salchow. Their problems came, instead, with the individual jump. They saved their best trick until last: a lateral triple twist. Once again, they had the most artistically advanced program, set to Rimski-Korsakov's Scheherazade. (Both in costumes and choreography, it reminded some spectators of the 1984 free dance of Blumberg and Seibert, to whom they paid full tribute at the press conference.)

Murugova and Torgashov concluded the event with a technically strong performance, highlighted by side-by-side jump sequences beginning with double Axels and ending with double toe loops. The throw triple toe loop and throw triple Salchow were excellent, but in some areas this couple were a bit lacking. They only did a double twist and the spins were not always in unison. The main criticism was the lack of any artistic motivation in what they were doing; they might just as well have performed without music.

The final results saw Brasseur and Eisler winning their first gold medal at an international event. Schwarz and Koenig moved ahead of Murugova and Torgashov to take the silver, leaving the Soviets with the bronze. The Seybolds maintained their fourth position.

Dance

If there was one event in which the favorites looked unbeatable, it was in ice dancing. Soviet skaters Natalia Annenko and Genrikh Sretensky, fourth at the Olympics and fourth in each of the last three World Championships, were the class of the field. This did not mean, however, that the event would be without drama and controversy. In fact, it began before the competition itself got underway. First, because of a lack of sufficient judges, the event had two judges from the same country, in this case Canada. (I can't recall ever seeing that happen before.) Then, while warming up for the first compulsory dance, popular Canadians Karyn and Rod Garossino swerved to avoid another couple, slipped, and crashed into the boards. Karyn sprained her wrist and Rod, his ankle. They were forced to withdraw.

The compulsories themselves were almost an anti-climax. Annenko and Sretensky, with their superior flow and presentation, had no trouble winning both the Westminster Waltz and the Rhumba. April Sargent and Russ Witherby of the U.S. were second and the other Canadian team of Melanie Cole and Michael Farrington were third. Americans Jodie Balogh and Jerod Swallow finished fifth.

One thing seemed clear at the OSP: while the Americans and Canadians appear to know what a Charleston is, the Soviets clearly do not. Sargent and Witherby, and Cole and Farrington gave entertaining performances that evoked the Roaring Twenties, both in choreography and costumes. Whatever the Soviets were doing on the ice, however, it certainly was not a Charleston. Some thought that the music was closer to ragtime, but be that as it may, all seven judges marked this couple lower in presentation than in composition. Incredibly, Annenko and Sretensky still managed to take a four-judge majority and win the OSP.

In the free dance, the lower ranked couples had mixed fortunes, all making discernible errors. Balogh and Swallow had an energetic free dance and maintained the fifth place they had held throughout. The French entry, Sophie Moniotte and Pascal Lavanchy had an interesting dance set to, once again, Scheherazade. Considering the controversy that this music has aroused in ice dancing in the past, one can only wonder why a young, inexperienced couple would choose to use it. Predictably, some judges marked them down for the choice and others did not. The Italian team, Stefania Calegari and Pasquale Camerlengo, performed almost all of their program directly to the judges, thus virtually ignoring the other three sides of the arena.

The first of the leaders to skate, Sargent and Witherby gave a solid exhibition of traditional ice dancing. Eschewing the theme-oriented programs that some couples choose, they displayed the deep edges and fast footwork that earned them marks of 5.3 to 5.7. In contrast, Cole and Farrington deserved credit for trying something different, as they danced to pieces from the musical Chess. Choreographed as an abstract chess game, the program featured some interesting and unusual moves, and they performed, as did Sargent and Witherby, with a confidence and maturity that the lower-ranked teams couldn't match.

The last performers were Annenko and Sretensky. Although they skated well, their program was mainly notable for one thing: in choreography, music, and costuming, it was amazingly derivative of Bestemianova and Bukin. In no respect did it resemble anything that this couple has done before, but it did look like something the reigning World champions put together two or three years ago. Once again, most of the judges marked them down for artistic impression. They still took an easy six-judge majority and thus won both the free dance and the overall gold medal at Skate Canada, as they did in 1986. Sargent and Witherby took the silver medal, and Cole and Farrington the bronze.

Men

Speculation about the men's event centered around Victor Petrenko of the Soviet Union, Olympic and World bronze medalist, who was expected to be hard pressed by Canada's Kurt Browning, fresh from his victory at Skate Electric. After the first figure, the counter, Petrenko had the lead, followed by James Cygan of the United States. Browning was third in a field of twelve. The paragraph loop saw Petrenko maintain his lead, but Browning overtook Cygan for the second spot. The other American entrant, Angelo D'Agostino, was fourth.

The original program brought several fine performances. Canadian Matthew Hall, coming back from eighth place in figures, landed a beautiful triple loop, then a triple Lutz/double loop combination in an entertaining program. Another crowd favorite was Daniel Weiss of the Federal Republic of Germany. Although he could not match the technical difficulty of some of the others, his lively "Mambo" program was a big hit with the crowd and his step sequences were outstanding.

Browning led off the top group using music from Cotton Club. He executed a triple flip and a triple Axel/double loop combination. His style and presentation are enormously improved from last year and this program cleverly exhibits both his growing artistry and his sense of humor, particularly in a wonderful serpentine step sequence. Marks of 5.6 and 5.8 made him the skater to beat at this point.

As fate would have it, Petrenko followed. His combination was a triple Axel/triple toe loop and the optional jump was another triple toe loop. The program is set to modern synthesized music. One thing that became apparent was that the move from the old "short program" to the new "original program," while it has made the event more exciting for the audience, has probably made it harder for the judges. For instance, Petrenko's combination was more difficult than Browning's, but Browning landed his much more smoothly. Clearly, depending on what a judge considers most important, the decision could go either way, and in fact Petrenko won the original program over Browning by a 4-3 split of the judges.

D'Agostino followed with a strong performance, featuring a triple Lutz/double toe loop combination and a triple flip. Third place in the original program moved him up to third overall. Not so lucky was Cygan, who attempted triple flip/double toe but touched a hand down on the triple and fell on the double. Later in the program, he over-rotated the double Axel. A very good step sequence did show a lightness on his feet, reminiscent of Scott Hamilton, as is his penchant for unadorned speedskater-type costumes. Unfortunately, his errors cost him in the technical merit marks and he placed ninth in the original program, dropping to seventh overall.

Things didn't go too much better for Cygan in the free skating. In his opening double Axel, his free foot touched the ice. Although he did land three triples, others were turned into doubles. He finished seventh in the free, as well as overall.

The drama intensified when Browning took to the ice. Skating to French themes, which should do well in Paris next spring, he opened with a beautiful double Axel/half loop/triple Salchow combination. A couple of subsequent moves may not quite have been what he intended. The quadruple toe loop was "only" a triple and a triple flip became a double, but he shrugged off any disappointment and charged through the rest of his program, gaining in strength and confidence with every move through five more triples. He was greeted with an immediate standing ovation and marks of 5.7 to 5.9.

D'Agostino skated another strong, entertaining program with five good triples: two Lutzes, a flip, a loop, and a Salchow. A miss on a triple toe loop was the only blemish, and he easily held third place.

Petrenko presented his classical Don Quixote program. He had intended to open with a triple Axel/triple toe loop combination and, although he did accomplish both, he took several steps between. He turned out of the landing of the triple Lutz, then like Browning, he doubled a triple flip. After that, instead of ignoring the mistakes, he seemed to let them bother him. Six of the seven judges placed him second to Browning in the long.

ORSER: A SKATER'S LIFE

by Karen Sinkule & Catherine Rod

Orser: A Skater's Life makes for good reading. It is candid, amusing, touching, and thought-provoking. It can also be abrasive, irritating, and disturbing. Because people will have different reactions to what they read, the book is sure to be controversial. Whatever your opinion of Brian Orser, if you are any kind of skating fan, you will want to read this book.

As the title suggests, this is Orser's story, told from his point of view. There is little in the book about his life outside skating, but what he tells us about his skating existence is full of interesting details and insights. He begins with his childhood and what drew him to figure skating rather than hockey, an almost unheard of choice for a Canadian boy.

Orser goes on to introduce many of the people important to his development as a skater. His relationships with Doug Leigh, his coach, is one of the most complex with some very rough times. They are bound by mutual respect and admiration for each other's talent and by their commitment to prove that an unknown coach and skater from small-town Ontario can make it to the top of the sport.

Orser talks about Brian Boitano, Scott Hamilton, Katarina Witt, as well as other skaters we know too little about: Brian Pockar, Wilson and McCall, Bestemianova and Bukin, Kotin, and Fadeev. We get a feeling for the camaraderie that develops between top athletes from different countries who meet year after year. The special bond that forms among the elite transcends intense rivalries. Orser and Boitano have remained on good terms despite the "Battle of the Brians" hype. Throughout the years, but especially in 1988, Boitano comes across as a wonderful person and great friend.

To Orser, it often seems that the world of amateur figure skating is ruled by politics, influence, rumor, and above all, pressure. All top skaters deal with constant pressure but cope with it in different ways. Orser gives us a fascinating insight into this kind of pressure and how it affected him. He describes the frightening, intense anger which threatened to overwhelm him when training before important competitions went badly and how he eventually came to terms with it. He also explains the gradual development of "Team Orser" as a natural strategy for coping with weak areas of his preparation.

Orser draws us right into events and his feelings about them. The most poignant part of the book is his frank retelling of his 1988 Olympic experiences, from unexpected anger at not having won in 1984, to total disbelief because losing was not something he had allowed himself to consider. His description of his range of emotions is compelling. We seldom hear the stories of athletes who don't win the gold medal, so we are especially privileged to be let in so devastating and private a moment.

The book is a result of a collaboration between Orser and Steve Milton, a Canadian sports writer. In 1981, when he and Orser first talked about writing a book, he was the sports editor of Orser's hometown newspaper. Milton followed Orser more closely than any other reporter and was the only Canadian to have covered every World and Olympic competition during Orser's career.

Although Milton worked on his ideas for the book several years, Orser: A Skater's Life was actually written on a very tight schedule between Christmas 1987 and the summer of 1988. During the first months of 1988, Milton and Orser had many lengthy interviews, both in person and by telephone. Milton was able to guide Orser's recollections of people and events. He feels the book is seventy-percent Orser, ten-percent Milton as editor probing for missing stories and providing the book's structure, and twenty-percent Milton's own comments and explanations. Thanks to Milton's journalistic style, the book is very well written, letting Orser tell his own story in a crisp, fast-paced, and flowing style.

The major drawback of having been written within a short time frame is that the book is uneven. One problem is that Orser proffers negative comments about specific people but often fails to give the background that would let us understand the criticism. These comments are disruptive because they are at odds with the book's general positive tone and therefore are petty and out of place. His anger and frustration are obviously real, but without knowing the story, we are left to wonder if the criticisms are justified.

Another problem is that Orser's closing thoughts on his contributions to figure skating were made immediately after his disappointments at Olympics and Worlds—too soon really for anyone to give a balanced view. He presents himself isolated, in his own terms and not within the context of other skaters and skating, nor does he even acknowledge others who contributed significantly to the artistic side of the sport. Readers are likely to feel his appraisals are either self-serving or defensive. It will be interesting to find out how he assesses his amateur career a few years from now after he has achieved some distance from the difficult events of 1988.

Orser is quite candid throughout the book. While sometimes hard on others, he is also hard on himself and readily admits his failings and shortcomings. It is to his credit that he is willing to reveal both attractive and not-so-attractive aspects of his personality. Few seldom risk being this forthright.

Sentimental fans who want to see their heroes as ideal and flawless people will have difficulty accepting the reality of what it takes to be a top competitor. In Orser we get a picture of a complex person who is not necessarily easy to understand but who is always real and interesting.

Orser: A Skater's Life is not the book we might have expected. It is far more provocative. It makes us question what we expect in our champions, what price they are forced to pay, and what the world of figure skating is all about. Like any good book, it makes you think, and it leaves you wanting more.

INDY HOSTS FALL BOARD MEETING

The USFSA gratefully accepted the invitation from the Indiana/World Skating Academy to host the 1988 October Board of Directors Meeting, marking the first time in ten years that the meeting would not be held Colorado Springs. As Board members arrived, they were greeted with a perfect autumn weekend.

Many in attendance had not been in Indianapolis since the 1982 Nationals and were impressed with how much the city had grown and the many changes downtown. There are several new high rises and hotels; the century-old Union Station has been refurbished and filled with restaurants and shops; world-class facilities have been built for many sports, including the Pan Am Plaza Building with two full-size ice surfaces.

The days were filled with special meetings in addition to the full Board agenda. Several important decisions were to emerge, including site selections for the Worlds and Skate America. On Thursday, meetings lasted all day late into the evening. The Memorial Fund Operating Committee deliberated the escalating costs of training and evaluated the current methods of disbursements of funds. Guest speaker, Bob Trenary addressed the committee on behalf of skating parents. Trenary, father of Olympian Jill Trenary, offered suggestions regarding more effective ways to utilize skaters to generate money for the Memorial Fund and discussed special concerns of parents. Other committees meeting during the day included Judges Review, Selections, Nominating, and World Juniors.

Prior to the presentation of bids to host the 1992 World Championships, Dr. Graham hosted an informal reception for the bidders. "Too often these people come in, make their bids and leave," he explained. "We need to recognize the efforts of these dedicated people and the time and effort they put into preparing the bids."

Later, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Los Angeles made their bids, it became apparent the decision was going to be difficult. After considerable deliberation, the committee announced it had selected San Francisco.

"It was a difficult decision to make," said Charles U. Foster, Chairman of the Worlds Committee. "All three cities demonstrated they were capable of putting on a world-class event."

Later that evening, Board members were treated to a tour of the newly constructed I/WSA, a two rink skating/science facility in the Pam Am Plaza, complete with coaches rooms, human performance laboratory, weight rooms, and dance class areas. A champagne punch reception was followed by a skating party and an Italian dinner at rinkside.

The Board of Directors meeting officially began on Friday in the impressive Capitol Center, another downtown facility especially designed to host such meetings. Thanks to efficient scheduling and speedy reporting, the intensive agenda was covered on time. A Report of Action follows detailing all actions taken.

Following President Graham's adjournment of the meeting, members were whisked off for a unique ride on "Indianapolis Trolleys" to the home of former National competitors Jim and Janet Browning, members of the I/WSA Board of Directors. The couple served a buffet dinner in their beautiful northside home.

Saturday carried a full agenda which was completed by the Board. All was not over when President Graham gave his closing address to the Board. He and Mrs. Graham had planned a wonderful end to the successful meeting with a reception in the Olympic Suite high atop the Pan Am Plaza. Officers of the PGA who were arriving for their Board meeting joined USFSA Board members along with

I/WSA organizing committee members and local club officials and coaches. Tim Wood and JoJo Starbuck were special guests. Connie Graham's skillful planning and excellent buffet made the reception a fitting finale to a very successful week.

ment, let me take you behind the scenes into the windmills of a judge's mind—one who is serving as "judge," be it for a test session or a competitive event.

Before the appointed hour, I can guarantee you that every judge has a way of gearing up to do the best job possible. Each one of us is very much aware of our responsibility, the subjectivity of our decisions, and how far reaching they can be. No matter how much experience a judge has, we all prepare for duty. First of all, in order to keep our "eye" trained, we make it a point to watch skating in general whenever possible. Secondly, we seek, what I refer to as, private time, an absolute must for almost every judge I know.

Private time can be anywhere and anytime: alone in your room before bed, taking a walk by yourself, even while dusting the house, or often, as in my case, sitting on the plane in transit to the site. It is a dress rehearsal time each of us finds for a mental review of the basics and performance standards based on knowledge and experience.

When changes and new rules are instituted, all of us become "students" to absorb the most recent materials received from the USFSA on the subject. In all likelihood, we seek out some of our fellow judges and teaching professionals to discuss this information with to have a clearer understanding of it. We find ourselves thinking about it subconsciously as we go about our daily chores.

Another universal action among judges before leaving for the rink is to collect precious notes, which we all know by heart, but feel we must have with us, "just in case," and, of course, the Rulebook, our skating bible, is always part of our paraphernalia. (It goes with the carry-on baggage.) To have it in hand gives us much comfort as a pacifier gives a baby. We may never actually open the Rulebook, but because it is there we feel armed, and this equals confidence.

Perhaps the above ritual suggests to you that judges may be apprehensive about their judging. I don't believe this is the emotion that leads us to all of our individual preparation, especially in view of the feelings that go through the mind of the judge when arriving at the scene of the action. As we step into the familiar surroundings of an ice rink, see the skaters warming up, hear the music, pick up our judging board, all of a sudden, inside, we know all is well. We are comfortable, we feel prepared, and yes, we are confident that we can make the decisions that must be made!

As the well prepared judges take their seats to begin their duties, the individual idiosyncrasies of those on the panel are evident to their fellow judges. Some tap their foot to ascertain that dancers are keeping time with the music, others nod their head ever so slightly in rhythm to the music. What no one can see are various muscles within the bodies of those judges which are truly moving (albeit they are sitting still at the judge's table) as though they were actually performing.

Believe it or not, many of us still remember the "feel" of a well turned bracket, the thrill of elevation in a delayed Axel, or the exhilaration of dancing together as one. Almost without exception, we are so completely intent in watching the skater that we inadvertently skate along with each and every one. When we see difficulties arising (and many times we can see it before the skater may realize it), I can assure you that within the body of many a judge, the muscles are working overly hard to make a correction, or check out of a jump. In summary, we are with each and every skater, all the way.

So, how do we sort it out? It takes all of the above plus undivided attention and great concentration, combined with confidence gained from continual preparation, and continuing education in a sport we love. Subjective decisions are never easy, but we strive with heart and soul to do the best job possible for the skater.

THE PREMENSTRUAL SYNDROME

by Morton Rosenstein, M.D.

Premenstrual syndrome (PMS) has received very extensive coverage in the press and in many ladies' magazines, as well as being a frequent topic on many talk shows. It was first described about fifty years ago, however, there is a great deal of new interest in research on this topic because of the very large increase in the number of women in the work force as well as the current emphasis on women's health issues.

Most studies state that about thirty percent of women of reproductive age experience recurrent, temporary disruption of their personal, professional, or athletic lives due to the predictable appearance of distressing physical, psychological, and behavioral changes. Although marital discord, social isolationism, work inefficiency, and absenteeism are the usual results of this problem, in rare extreme cases suicidal and psychotic behavior and criminal activities ranging from baby-beating to theft and murder have been reported. PMS has been reported in women of all nationalities and races.

In the few studies done on cyclic behavior and athletic performance, the most profound results have been seen in the premenstrual period. The symptoms related to PMS cover a very wide range and may involve features representing every organ system. Some of the most common are bloating, breast tenderness, irritability, tension, anxiety, depression, headaches, crying spells, increased appetite, and weight gain. Most women complain that they can't discuss these symptoms with their doctors because they fear that they are going crazy or because they believe that their symptoms will be a source of embarrassment or ridicule.

The causes of PMS have been extensively investigated and numerous hormones and other bodily substances have been measured and no direct relationship has been found. There are no specific lab studies that are really helpful in diagnosing PMS.

The diagnosis of PMS is mainly reached by tracing a patient's symptoms in relation to their occurrence during her menstrual cycle. The symptoms are usually present for seven to fourteen days before the start of a period and tend to clear with the beginning of the period. Most doctors and clinics treating this problem have devised some form of calendar to relate the symptoms and the menstrual cycle. It is important to remember that if you do have a problem of this cyclical nature, it should be discussed with your doctor who may provide help in relieving some of the symptoms.

There are many types of treatment for PMS and they have varying degrees of success. Some have more of a proven scientific basis than others, but all will have some degree of success with some patients and some symptoms. Some of the things that are generally helpful include proper diet and exercise. Avoiding caffeine, alcohol, large amounts of sugars and salt, and smoking will have a beneficial effect on PMS symptoms.

The treatment plan has to be individualized according to the type and severity of symptoms that the patient has, and the amount of disruption of her life that these problems cause. Some of the medications used can have significant side effects and these must be weighed against the benefits to be gained.

With the above background on the problems that can be related to menstruation there have been many studies conducted on the effect of athletics on menstrual function. However, there is relatively little literature on the effect of cycle phase on actual athletic performance. A group of studies based on self-reports of performance effects have shown that 37% to 63% of the athletes did

LALIQUE TROPHY

DALE MITCH

The second annual Lalique Trophy, Grand Prix International of Paris, was held in November at the Palais Omnisport, site of the 1989 World Championships. The modern concrete and glass architecture of the arena with its grass covered exterior walls contrasts sharply with the 18th and 19th century buildings surrounding it in the Bercy area of Paris.

Sponsored by Cristal Lalique, the famous French glass company, this year a stunning trophy was created expressly for the competition by the firm's third-generation designer Marie-Claude Lalique. The trophy captures the dramatic movement of the figure skater in tiered swirls of satin-finished crystal, as seen on this month's cover. The pieces were designed exclusively for the competition and presented to each of the medalists.

Fifty-four competitors from fourteen countries gathered for the event. French champions, Paul and Isabelle Duchesnay withdrew at the last minute due to Isabelle's recent back injury. An unusual schedule held all of the men's, ladies', and pair's original programs and the dance OSP on one night, all in one sitting, followed by all of the long programs and free dance one after the other the next night.

The figures' competition set a deceptive beginning in the men's event with Grzegorz Filipowski of Poland placing first; Dmitri Gromov of the USSR, second; USA's Paul Wylie third; with Axel Mederic of France fourth and Lars Dresler of Denmark fifth.

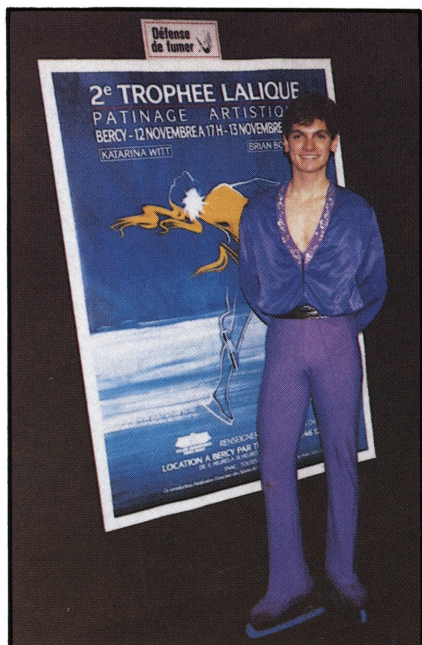

The original program, skated before only a handful of spectators, saw dramatic indications of changes to come. Wylie unleashed a stylish, high energy, and dynamic original program outpointing Filipowski by 5 to 7 judges. Filipowski used a triple Axel-double toe for the combination but missed the required double Axel which cost him mandatory deductions. Makato Kano of Japan placed third after a ninth in figures, followed by Michael Slipchuck of Canada who placed fourth after an eighth in figures.

Going into the long, Filipowski held first by a .2 points margin, followed by Wylie, Gromov of the USSR, with Mederic in fourth and Kano in fifth.

The long program skated before about a quarter-capacity house drew both outstanding and disappointing performances. Gromov appeared out of sync with his music with immature presentation and encountered several problems for a fifth placement. Mederic had an off night with several falls and a ninth in the free.

and the gold medal. Grossman, a student of Uta Müller, using hand movements and Broadway show music reminiscent of Katarina Witt, skated a high energy program displaying fast air speed on jumps, placed second in the long, after an eighth-place start in figures to finish third.

Campbell, second going into the long, had an off night doubling her triples and ended fourth overall. Gorbenko with strong jumps and spins placed third and held for the silver medal.

DALE MITCH

Wylie's strong program and fluid presentation to music from the film The Mission and Poulenc's Organ Concerto made him a spontaneous audience favorite. After a bumpy start with a three turn after the triple Axel, he landed four other triples, one in combination to win the long and first overall.

Filipowski two-footed the triple Axel and had other problems but held second in the long and dropped to second overall. Slipchuck came through with a strong freestyle and a third final placement.

The ladies' event began with Claudia Leistner of the Federal Republic of Germany taking the lead followed by Jeri Campbell, Evelyn Grossman of the German Democratic Republic in third, and Natalia Gorbenko of the USSR in fourth.

Leistner also won the original program, followed closely by Campbell in second, then Grossman and Gorbenko, making a four-way race for medals.

In the long, despite a fall on a triple loop and a touchdown on another triple, Leistner garnered scores for top placement

In the dance, Susan Wynne and Joseph Druar took the lead with the Westminster Waltz and Yankee Polka compulsories, carried through with a first for their rousing and technically difficult OSP, and clearly won the free dance for the coveted crystal trophy. Sharon Jones and Paul Askham of Great Britain, held second throughout, followed by Oksana Grischuk and Alexandre Tchitchkov, of the USSR, in third.

The pair's competition with only a small field of six was the weakest division of the competition. Like dance, placements remained constant for the original and long programs. Elena Bechke and Denis Petrov of the USSR, were prominent with a fast long program that included a difficult split twist lift directly into a throw triple Salchow. He has an almost classic body line unusual in pair skating, somewhat reminiscent of Sergei Ponomarenko. They deservedly won, followed by Mandy Woetzel and Axel Rauschenbach of the German Democratic Republic, who after a rough start in the long on a bad twist catch and rather slow spins, managed a clean throw double Axel and an adequate but not exciting program for second place.

Katy Keeley and Joseph Mero did a complicated change hand lift in the long and a good throw double Axel, but a fall on a throw Salchow held them in third for the bronze.

The exhibition was highlighted with special appearances by Olympic Champions Katarina Witt and Brian Boitano, both greeted enthusiastically by the Parisian crowd, well aware of the special treat of having these two stars of ice in the same exhibition. Their brilliance was only a part of the total afternoon and included superb presentations by all of the medal winners.

Only in its second year, the Lalique Trophy has all indications and promise of becoming the premier European international figure skating competition.

Adult Ladies

myself. I was scared to death when I competed but I had a really good time."

Ann Bruner-Welch who is new to competition this year in Santa Rosa, California, wants to "just compete this year and nothing else," while in San Francisco, Melody Mayo would like to "work on double jumps." York also wants to work on double jumps believing, "I don't think an adult should limit herself. She should take it as far as she can."

Some adults take their goals into the judging ranks, such as Rye, New York's Edythe McKee, who has become a Low Test Judge while working on her third figure test. Flygare, an Intermediate Judge, would like to become a World Judge, and Stockemer, a Low Test Judge, would like to become an Intermediate and Novice Competition Judge. Dow, a Low Test Judge, is also working toward an Accountant appointment.

Horton would like to teach. She would like to "inspire other minorities such as myself to participate."

"I have had experience working with mentally retarded and physically handicapped children and have helped itty-bitty kids," says Cathy Meserole of Littleton, Colorado. "I want to teach anyone and everyone to skate. What I like most is when someone comes up to come on a public session and says to me, 'How do you do that?' It gives me a whole lot of self-satisfaction to share my enjoyment with someone else."

But it was Spellman who summed up the feeling of adult ladies. "Never give it up. Always continue to skate. Always do your best. Try to learn more. Perfect it, and never get stuck in a rut."

- 11 Pittsfield Invitational Competition, sponsored by the Pittsfield FSC, at the Pittsfield Boys' Club Rink, 16 Melville St., Pittsfield, MA 01201. Freestyle, Dance Solo, and Showcase events. For information contact: Nancy Regan, 47 Pollock Dr., Pittsfield, MA 01201, 413-442-5637.

not seem to show any difference in performance during their cycle. 8% to 59% reported their worst performance during their menstrual or pre-menstrual phase and 13% to 29% reported their best performance during the menstrual phase. A recently published study on a small number of swimmers, with a much more in-depth evaluation of performance times and the exact relationship to the menstrual cycle showed that the subjects swam consistently faster during their menstrual flow and slower during the pre-menstrual period.

Skate Canada

The last competitor, Matthew Hall, skated a stylish program with six triple jumps. A fourth place in the free skating gave him an overall fourth placement.

The final results proved Browning a very popular gold medal winner, with Petrenko receiving the silver and D'Agostino the bronze. It was a fitting conclusion, with the host country having two victories to celebrate. For the American team, there were disappointments as well as successes, and several fine performances to salute.
