News Briefs

One million-dollar grand prize will be available to consumers during each of CBS's 16 days of coverage of the Olympic Winter Games in Albertville, France, this month.

Through a joint promotion Coca-Cola USA and CBS will offer "Medals & Millions." Consumers can claim the one million dollar prize by matching a "Watch and Win" number to be broadcast each night, Saturday, February 8 through Sunday, February 23.

The grand prizes are part of a $40 million prize package available to consumers. Medals & Millions game pieces are available with specially marked two- and three-liter bottles and 12 ounce can multi-packs of Coca-Cola products. Game pieces offer two ways to win. On each piece, a number is printed which, if broadcast on CBS during the Games, means a one million dollar prize. In addition, each game piece features a "Match and Win" component. Each game piece lists a country name, an Olympic event and medal level. If athletes from the listed country win the corresponding medal in the corresponding event, consumers win prizes ranging from cash to Olympic pins.

Dorothy Hamill Inducted into U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame

Olympic Figure Skating Champion Dorothy Hamill was one of seven members of the "Class of 1991," the most recent inductees to the U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame. The induction ceremony was the grand finale of the inaugural Olympic Congress of the USA, a three-day exposition for the U.S. Olympic Movement held in Colorado Springs last fall.

The U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame was conceived by the U.S. Olympic Committee (USOC) and Coca-Cola USA in 1979 to honor Olympic achievements of American athletes and to promote interest in the U.S. Olympic Movement in the years between Olympiads. The National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association (NSSA) was asked to provide the guidelines for the nomination and selection process. Athletes become eligible for the Hall five years after their final Olympic competition. Members are selected through balloting among the 1,000 members of the NSSA, USOC officials, and current Hall of Fame members. The first inductees to the U.S. Olympic Hall of Fame were the "Charter Class of 1983" of which Peggy Fleming was a member.

Hamill is certainly a worthy addition to this prestigious Hall of Fame. A three-time U.S. ladies' champion when she won the gold medal at the 1976 Olympic Winter Games in Innsbruck, Austria, she went on to win the 1976 World Championships a month later. Few, if any, amateur athletes have had her impact upon the American public. Her "wedge" hairstyle became a sensation that swept the country. She was named "the most trusted woman in America" by Ladies Home Journal. She made numerous public and television appearances and was among the celebrated Americans invited to attend the United States' bicentennial commemoration at the White House.

Others inducted with Hamill as the "Class of 1991" were hurdlers Lee Calhoun (deceased) and Willie D. Davenport; sprinter Charley Paddock (deceased); gymnasts Bart Conner and Peter Vidmar; and former USOC President William E. Simon. Hamill is the fourth representative of the sport of figure skating to be so honored. After Peggy Fleming, Tenley Albright was inducted in 1988 and Scott Hamilton in 1990.

HONORS AND AWARDS

Great Britain's 1980 Olympic Gold Medalist Robin Cousins was named World Professional Figure Skater of the Year by American Skating World, following the NutraSweet World Professional Figure Skating Championships in Landover, Maryland, December 6th. Cousins placed third in the competition, although he captured first place in the artistic portion of the contest. NBC will telecast the event March 15 and 22. Cousins received the award based on his contributions to the sport and art of figure skating and the development of many notable and humanitarian achievements.

The first annual Golden Blade Award was presented to Rory Flack at the 1991 U.S. Open Professional Figure Skating Championships in Seattle, Wash., December. The award is given by Blades On Ice; the winner named by audience appreciation of a most entertaining performance. Gerri Walbert, Editor of Blades On Ice, and Carole Shulman, Executive Director of the Professional Skaters Guild of America presented the first-ever award to Flack.

Tonya Harding was honored in her hometown of Portland, Ore., by blanketing the winner of the feature race named in her honor at Portland Meadows.

She met in the winner's circle with winning jockey Ralph Garcia. Trainer of the winning entry, Azeer, is Jack Root.

CELEBRATIONS

The Rink at Rockefeller Plaza opened its 55th ice skating season at Rockefeller Center this fall in a ceremony which saluted the hopes and dreams of the Winter Olympic Games.

The skating program began with six "Flag Children" from the SC of New York who took to the ice carrying the Olympic flags. Two-time Olympian and the rink's resident skating professional, JoJo Starbuck, produced, directed and hosted the event and introduced the impressive roster of skaters including: Gillian Wachsmann and Todd Waggoner, Calla Urbanski and Rocky Marval, Nicole Bobek, Ararat Zakarian and Akop Manoukin, USSR, David Liu, Chinese Taipei, Surya Bonaly, France, and Henrik Walentine, Denmark.

BIRTHS

Robi (Shepard) and husband Mark Chalmers of Steamboat Plaza, Colo., announced the birth of their first child, daughter Devan Diane, born November 11. Robi toured with Ice Capades and taught in Phoenix and Flagstaff, Ariz., and in Colorado. She was a dance medalist and U.S. team member with partner Kelly Witt.

BEREAVEMENTS

It is with great sadness that the Creve Coeur FSC announces the death of its professional, Michael Harris. He was a member of Creve Coeur SC and one of its professional instructors since 1983.

Prior to joining Creve Coeur, he was an instructor in Wichita, Kans., Nottingham, Sheffield, and London, England. He was a British national and world professional competitor and passed the British silver figure, free, dance and free dance tests as well as two USFSA pre-gold tests.

Often he offered his time and skills free to the club to try to get new programs off the ground or to help the club when budgets were especially tight.

His wry sense of humor and unselfish dedication to figure skating will be missed by his many friends in Creve Coeur.

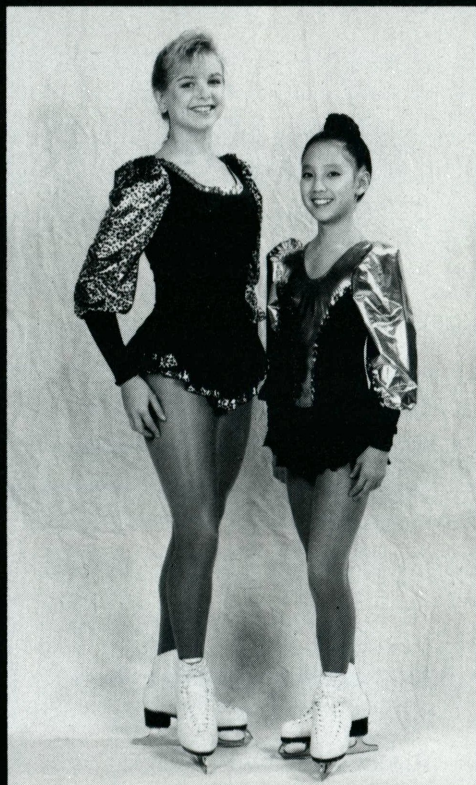

Harris is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Harris of St. Louis.

Carroll is the mother of Frank Carroll, Skating Director for Ice Castle International Training Center at Lake Arrowhead, Calif.

Harriet Iobst, wife of USFSA past president Oscar Iobst, passed away December 4, following a prolonged illness. Heartfelt sympathy is offered to the Iobst family who has given so much of their time and energy to support figure skaters and the USFSA.

GRANTS

The Women's Sports Foundation recently announced that 16 individuals and five teams would receive grants; two of which went to Broadmoor SC members Nicole Bobek and Robyn Petrosky. Both received monies from the WSF Travel and Training Fund which provides direct financial aid to aspiring female athletes for travel, coaching or other expenses. Only athletes who show the dedication required to reach the highest levels within their sport and who have compiled a successful competitive record receive grants. This is the second Travel and Training grant that Bobek has received from the WSF.

HARRIS

On Choreographing Variations on a Theme

Any music that can be carried out in movement can be used in choreographing a theme. You can use ballet, modern, jazz, ethnic (reflecting a nation--although composers today are more international); electronic (produced by electrical equipment), and music concrete (made up of sounds of actual things, sometimes distorted).

Learning to read musical notes and their time values can add much to your skills in interpreting and expressing music, as well as being able to count the music properly to prepare you for the choreographic experience.

Many skating people have the idea that if you do "a movement" somewhere in the program, it must not be repeated. Yes, a program can be quite boring (since each program is relatively short) if the same movements are being performed repeatedly. However, there are times when the composer has used variations on a basic theme. A theme is like a song. It is usually more than eight bars, and has two or three sections to it. A variation is when the theme is repeated with certain changes or modifications. The melody is always there, but changes occur rhythmically by using certain mechanical processes. It is a form in which a musical idea is stated and then repeated with various modifications, yet retaining its identity.

If your music is cut to include a variation on the theme, you might consider doing a variation of the movement you used when skating to the theme. You can do this by listening to the inventions in the music. An invention is something added to the basic structure done in a harmonious manner. The composer will take one melody and digress, perhaps transposing it in another key. After stating the melody, the composer will continue on this vein, but invent on fragments of the theme. You will hear the melody stated, then sometimes it will be repeated, but not as a whole. You will hear fragments of the stated theme.

By understanding even a few of the mechanics in variations, you can become more adept in creating movements that express the music. Although there are more, I have chosen four that I would like to discuss: elition, augmentation, diminution, and inversion.

ELITION

This means to leave some notes out of the basic theme. It is like saying "can't" instead of cannot, or "don't" instead of do not. It is very easy to see how you can apply this to movement. At the points of omission in the musical phrase, you can omit that part of the movement you originally set. However, you must take care to see that there is a suitable transition connecting the movements together.

AUGMENTATION

The composer takes notes from the basic theme and stretches them out so they have a greater value than those first used. If there were two quarter notes having one count each in the theme, they might become two half notes, each having the value of two counts. Here again, you could use your theme movements and hold them for a longer period of time.

DIMINUTION

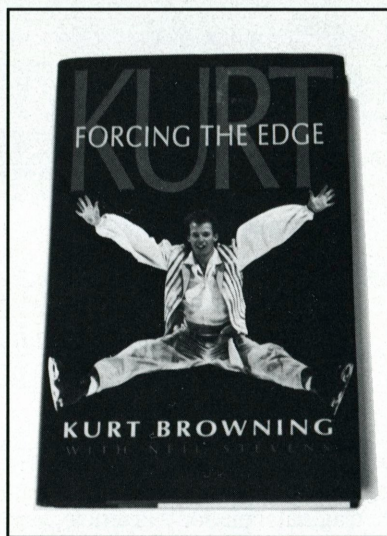

This is the opposite of augmentation. It is the restatement of a theme or thematic pattern by shifting the rhythm; placing the bar line differently. Whole or parts of a phrase are squeezed together and the notes are used with shorter time values. A half note (two counts) could be changed to quarter notes (one count). You can then take these shorter time values and match them up with the movements in that same part, but decrease the time these movements are held.

INVERSION

One way to invert is to change the position of the notes to upside down. The first note remains the same. If the notes go up so many places, then in inversion, they go down so many places. They can be reversed or played backwards.

Inversions need not be constant and can be recognized by rhythm and melodic patterns. This becomes a very interesting way to choreograph. You can take a small section and invert the moves so that the last move becomes the first one, and the first move then becomes the last. Here again, you must make the changes necessary to blend the movements into each other. It will result in an entirely different look.

It is interesting to take a musical score and look for the variation on the theme. You can learn to see the variations more clearly and quicker than listening to the music. Whether you follow a score, or find the variations by listening to the music, using the idea of changing movements by following the variations elition, augmentation, diminution and inversion, can open up ways of creating new movement ideas to make your program more interesting.

OPERATIONS

Developing Unity to Produce Rink Profits

by Richard Schiller

The original topic for this article was to be "strange marriages in ice skating," e.g. figure skating pros teaching hockey skills to adults. However, this did not seem to be the best approach to a topic which more accurately stated is "how on earth are we going to work together to save the ice rinks that we currently have?" We too often approach this problem with creative programming, marketing, and revenue production as the path toward survival, but I contend these are only secondary to the only true lasting formula: Cooperative support seen unilaterally with all skating units in your hometown as well as across the nation.

How do we define success in the ice skating industry? There was a time when pure numbers in attendance was the unit of measure, but this is no more. We are now closer than any other leisure time activity to a demand for revenue production and having it being the only measure of value. In the private sector this is old news and further statements may have little value other than to raise our plea to unite all skating activities to save a dying industry.

According to the latest statistics, over 60 percent of all ice arenas are operated by municipalities of which less than 1 percent turn a pure profit (pure net would include depreciation and interest type expense). To further the budgetary problems some arenas are experiencing revenue raiders within their own organization—examples of this are called "municipal service charges," "operating fees," etc. This is likened to a franchise fee or accounting charge levied against the arena's account, generally without a quantitative basis for the charge. This then allows the agency to assess fees equal to the arena profit thus eliminating a "revenue demand" measurement of success which then presents a picture of a losing operation.

We have just over 1,500 arenas in the United States, and using the 60/40 ratio, approximately 900 arenas are municipally operated. Of these, perhaps 10 show a pure profit or could use the "revenue demand" concept to measure their success. It is then obvious that to maintain a public presence in the industry one of two things must take place:

1. All facility programs must produce revenue on a "cost plus" basis. This must include competitions, shows, etc. and/or;

2. Governmental agencies must take a broader look at the industry and start providing subsidies standards to the sport. This would bring it in line with other broad-based leisure time activities, such as swimming.

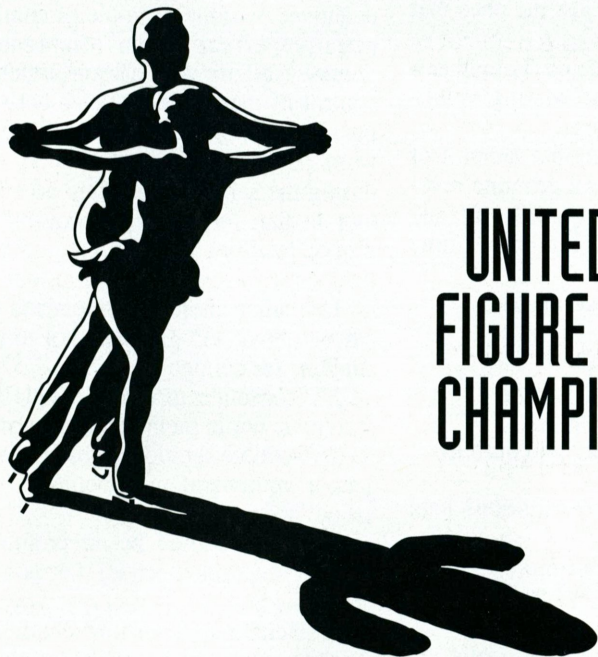

If we fail to address the concept of "unity" in our industry, neither of the above can be achieved. At the local level, we as managers, can have a major impact by:

1. Requesting a representative from each user group work with us in an advisory position;

2. Providing a means for input on rates and ice scheduling;

3. Producing a monthly "state of the facility" report for the users;

4. Becoming an aggressive promoter of all forms of skating, not just the ones that interest you most;

5. Hosting a "season's" and "volunteer's banquet" and social hour, mixing volunteers from all program areas.

This concept can develop a handful of effective programs that can generate revenue, but more importantly will cultivate unity within the skating community. Some possibilities are:

1. Power skating instruction for:
 - a. Hockey referees
 - b. Adult hockey players
 - c. Beginning hockey players (both male and female)
 - d. The general skater, held during public skating slots
2. Sanctioned skating exhibitions held during:
 - a. Public skating half-time
 - b. Amateur and/or high school hockey period changes
 - c. Special slots open to the public which promote skating other than the normal ice show
3. Transitional Skating Instruction:
 - a. Freestyle to short course racing instruction
 - b. Figure and general instruction to Men's and Women's Hockey
4. Instruction for adult precision team beginners

On the National level our committee is working to develop a forum for partnerships in ice arena management. We have had joint competitions with the ISIA and are currently working toward a "cooperative" with USA Hockey. The Rink Operations Committee is actively working for unity, and seek further involvement from arena managers, park directors, etc.

Many organizations can have a major positive or negative effect on the industry. If one of these groups seeks control rather than cooperation the result will certainly be negative. A prime example of control and negative effect is the Michigan High School Athletic Association which seeks control of the varsity athletes both in and out of school by banning any varsity athlete from participating in club sport activity during the school year. They go even further in that they seek to prohibit use of school facilities for any team sport other than varsity activities. They further state:

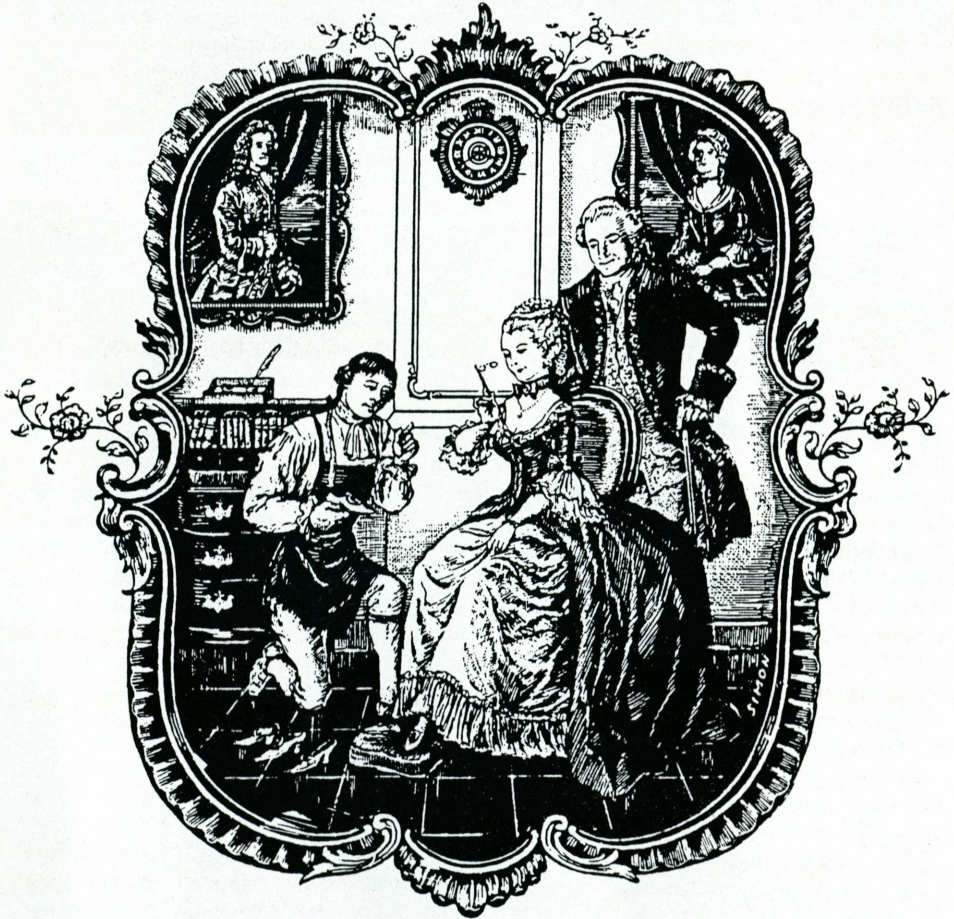

1. "...interscholastic athletics is to help educate boys and girls and not to prepare students for college athletics"
2. "...specialization in a single athletic activity is not in their best interests"
3. "Schools should not allow the use of school equipment and facilities by non-school organizations..."
4. "There should be no promotion or publicity within a school for non-school programs..."
5. "Neither students nor school coaches should engage in non-school activities during the school year which resemble in any way a school team practicing or competing out of season"

This is not a positive cooperative approach to a problem and although not visible at first glance would have a major impact on skating and in particular, hockey. The MHSAA claims that Kansas, Missouri, and New Jersey currently have similar policies. Is that true? Let the USFSA Rink Operations Committee hear from you.

What is clear is that we can not afford to lose any of our users or impede their access to their skating activity. Enhancement of all forms of skating is our desire; unity of the managing professionals is our goal.

Richard Schiller is a member of the USFSA Rink Operations Committee.

NATIONS CUPU.S. Retains Titleby Marcia Burchstead*

Team USA successfully retained their title at Nations Cup on Ice '91, competition in Gelsenkirchen, Germany. Capturing the gold medal in both the ladies' and men's singles division, a bronze in ice dance and fourth in pairs, they scored 56 total points and placed ahead of the Soviet Union, second with 51 and Czechoslovakia, third with 48.

Nancy Kerrigan, rebounded from a relatively poor showing the previous week at Trophee Lalique, in Albertville, France to take the ladies' title with straight first places from all nine judges in both sections. In the original program, she combined a triple Lutz with a double toe loop and demonstrated well positioned spins and intricate footwork to hold off challenges from Evelyn Grossmann, 1990 European Champion, who landed a double loop/triple toe loop combination and Marina Kielmann reigning German champion, who also utilized a triple Lutz/double toe loop, and finished second and third in this section respectively. Josée Chouinard, Canadian champion, fell on her triple Lutz attempt and omitted her second jump and also fell out of the landing of the double Axel dashing any medal hopes she may have harbored.

Grossmann, who has been plagued by illness and injury which kept her out of the 1991 World Championships, is just resuming her on-ice training after a bout with shin splints. Her coach, Jutta Müller, questioned her ability to complete the arduous free skate and her analysis proved to be correct. She singled two double Axel attempts, two footing the landing of one and also singled a Salchow combined with a double toe loop. She also two-footed a triple Salchow landing and turned threes between her triple toe loop/double Lutz combination. A solo triple toe loop went clean but the overall program was disappointing and she dropped to sixth in this portion and finished fifth.

Kielmann, skating last, landed four clean triples; the toe loop combined with a double toe loop, Salchow, loop, and flip. Only a successful Lutz eluded her despite two attempts; putting her hand down on the first and falling on the second. Her signature "roller skating," jump combination sequence of Axel/loop/loop/ double loop/loop/double loop ended the program skated to Latin rhythms and she was able to move into second place.

The two French entries: Marie Pierre Leray and Laetitia Hubert, also rebounded from disappointing showings at the previous week's competition in their home country, and pulled up to third and fourth place.

Kerrigan joins her compatriots Tonya Harding and Kristi Yamaguchi, in winning this title which they captured in 1989 and 1990 respectively.

Mark Mitchell impressed the judges, spectators, and press alike, with two strong programs to capture the men's title. The Europeans considered him a dark horse entry although he won the Novarat Trophy, in 1988 in Budapest, Hungary and has twice been the alternate to the World Team. His level of technical difficulty coupled with superior style was unmatched. Just prior to arriving in Gelsenkirchen he had encountered a bit of bad luck, when one of his boots broke and he was forced to compete with a brand new boot. He certainly did not display any anxiety over the situation during his performances. In the free skate he demonstrated all six triple jumps combining the triple flip with a double toe loop. Centered and well positioned spins, intricate footwork, and elegant presentation in a program to music from the film, On the Waterfront, earned him first place from all the judges in the free skate.

The Canadian entry, Michael Slipchuk, with a world ranking of seventh had to be considered the favorite going into the competition but disastrous performances in both the original program and free skate—falling five times and landing only one clean triple—finished him in seventh place.

The three German entries. Mirko Eichhorn, Daniel Weiss, and Ronny Winkler, were all looking for a strong showing here as Germany will be allowed one entry at both the Olympic Winter Games and World Championships.

Eichhorn wound up in second place with a strong free skate to music from the film, The Untouchables, utilizing seven triple jumps including a triple toe loop/triple Salchow combination.

Weiss's stylish presentation in both programs and immense popularity with the audience, kept him third and Winkler, overcoming difficulties in the original program, rebounded in the free skate to pull up to fourth overall.

In the pairs' division, two-time World Silver medalists, Isabelle Brasseur and Lloyd Eisler of Canada unveiled two new programs for this season and their speed, power, and strength held off a strong challenge from the Soviet entry; Evgenia Shishkova and Vadim Naumov, ranked fifth in the world. Eisler is still recuperating from two knee operations; one in June and one in September and stated he had felt a bit afraid coming into this competition but rated their programs at about 70-75 percent ready at this point. A high and secure quad twist lift opened their free skate and although they faltered later when Brasseur fell on a throw triple Salchow and the double Axel jumps were not cleanly landed, they did complete a throw triple toe loop. The lifts and footwork and superior presentation were rewarded with high artistic impression marks and the title.

Shishkova and Naumov were also technically superior opening their program with triple toe loop jumps into split triple twist, throw triple toe loop, and double Axel jumps. They did receive two first places in this section from the U.S. and Soviet judges.

Third place went to the entry from Czechoslovakia; Radka Kovarikova and Rene Novotny, sixth at the 1991 World Championships, who also have an arsenal of technically difficult elements in their program.

The U.S. entry of Calla Urbanski and Rocky Marval never got on the right track in this competition missing the back outside death spiral in the original program when she collapsed after he was positioned. In the free skate, she fell on the double Axel jump and singled a jump later in the program, but many of their more technically difficult moves were cleanly completed including a triple twist lift and throw triple Salchow and throw double Axel earning them fourth place. Urbanski's gritty determination and Marval's strength in lifts and throws combine to make them an exciting team to watch.

The ice dance title went to the Soviet entry for the third consecutive time. The recent Skate America champions, Totjana Navka and Samuel Gezaljan, coached by Natalia Dubova dominated a field of entries missing the top world medalists and contenders. The U.S. entry of April Sargent-Thomas and Russ Witherby again dropped a place after the free dance being nipped on a five to four split panel decision.

The Czech champions, Katerina Mrazova and Martin Simecek, second here, were quite pleased with their improvement in the last year and their rapid progress despite their fairly recent partnership.

The German entry of former U.S. competitor Jennifer Goolsbee and Hendryk Schamberger finished fifth with a theme dance to music from the film, The Untouchables. They met several years ago at a dance seminar at the German Training Center located in Oberstdorf and paired up last year when their respective partnerships dissolved. In the original dance there has been a trend noticed at the last two international competitions of skaters utilizing music which is not a true Polka. Many of these rhythms sounded like American hoedown music and even the dance interpretations more closely resemble a hoedown rather than a Polka. Competitors utilizing these musical selections have been marked down in this segment and hopefully these programs will be revised prior to the European Championships and Olympic Winter Games.

During the Exhibition held on Saturday evening the team trophy was presented to Mrs. Coco Shean, leader of the U.S. team and the individual skaters each received a smaller replica of the trophy.

Petr Barna, of Czechoslovakia, currently ranked fourth in the World and many time World Professional Champion, Denise Biellmann of Switzerland presented several numbers at the Exhibition.

The Deutsche Eislauf Union (DEU) which organized the event and RWE an electrical concern, which was the prime sponsor, should be acknowledged for hosting a first class competition. The city of Gelsenkirchen should also be commended for the high-standard facilities they provided the skaters and audience at the Emscher-Lippe-Halle located in the Sports Paradies complex.

U.S. Team Brings Home Two Medals

by Marit Rasmussen

The Piruetten senior and junior this year had a record number of entries—76 participants from 21 nations—thus making in one of the largest international figure skating events held this season. The reason for the enormous interest could very well be the fact that this year's competition was held in Lillehammer as a pre-Olympic test event for the 1994 Olympics. Many nations chose to send their prospects for the '94 Games to Lillehammer to get to know the city.

The draw took place in the spectacular Troll Hall where scenes of Norwegian fairy tales and folklore were displayed in rock caves around the magnificent hall.

Senior men had 12 competitors from 11 nations. Unfortunately, Norway's own hope Jan Erik Digernes was missing due to a foot injury that happened in his hotel room during Skate Canada, but otherwise a strong field of up-and-coming skaters and experienced veterans competed.

The Men's O.P. had its drama, but that was off the ice. Matthew Powers of Canada suffered a throat infection and was put on a penicillin cure. This and jet-lag made a very sleepy combination and Powers would have missed the competition altogether, had his coach not phoned his room after the competition had started. Powers was out of bed and in costume in less than ten minutes and an efficient organization made sure that he got to the rink just in time to go on the ice. He skated his original on pure instinct, but was still able to capture third place.

Second in the original was David Liu of Chinese Taipei with a faultless performance including a triple flip/double toe combination. Liu's original is set to the music "Gabriel's Oboe" and is sheer poetry in motion. His famous step sequence all on one foot from one end of the rink to the other, really melted the by then deep frozen spectators in Kristins Hall. Liu received 5.7 in the presentation marks for his lyrical performance, but could not beat American Scott Davis, who opened with a superb triple Axel/double toe combination and later included a triple Lutz to win the original.

Davis opened his free with the music from "Gaité Parisienne" that Kurt Browning made famous a couple of years ago—and in almost the same confident style with a strong triple Lutz/triple toe combination. He skated a well put together program with five triples and won, despite the fact that he was not able to repeat the triple Axel from the original program.

Liu held on to second place with another beautiful performance, choreographed to the very last note of music. He included three triples cleanly, but the step-sequences and spins are what makes the audience remember him. Again there were high and well deserved presentation marks for Liu.

The surprise of the evening was the French skater Frederic Lebihan, who after a disappointing sixth place in the original pulled up to third in the free and overall. Both he and Ralph Burgart of Austria gave solid performances to pass the fever-ridden Powers, who by then had lost the instinct also and skated in a trance—unable to land more than one of his planned five triples cleanly.

Senior ladies had drawn 24 competitors from 17 nations to Lillehammer, including Greece, which competed in international events for the first time this year.

Lisa Sargeant of Canada was the favorite, but was edged out of first place in the short program by a lovely performance from Lily Lyoonjung Lee of Korea. She landed a splendid triple loop/double toe combination, included a beautiful layback spin, and above all, her radiant personality filled Kristins Hall arena. Lee's first placement in the original program was well deserved. Sargeant finished second with a solid if not sparkling performance, with Kyoko Ina (formerly Japan, now U.S.) in third place.

Sargeant was first of the favorites to skate for free—and a most determined Lisa came on the ice. This time she really fought back, and—with three clean triples and a good attempt on a triple Axel—the audience finally had a glimpse of the girl who captured sixth place in Worlds in 1990, perhaps lacking a bit of sparkle, but with plenty of heart. Sargeant's performance in the free put her in first place overall.

Next came Kyoko Ina with a charming and confident performance. Skating to "Planets" by Holst, she included a triple Salchow/double toe and triple toe/double toe combinations as well as a second triple Salchow to pull up to second place.

Lily Lyoonjung Lee may not have lead many skating competitions—and it obviously was a little overwhelming for her. Lee's program set to "The Blue Danube" has an opening so beautiful it brings tears to your eyes, but a fall on her best jump, the triple loop and a forward landed triple toe was enough to push her down to third place in this tough company. Nevertheless, Lee is an absolute pleasure to watch, and she never lost her radiance and appeal with the audience, despite her unlucky landings.

An excellent performance also was given by Sweden's Hélène Persson who captured third place in the free with a fast and exciting performance including a triple Salchow/double toe combination. Persson finished fourth overall.

Junior men sported 12 competitors from 11 nations with 15 year-old Alexander Abt from Moscow (second in the 1991 World Junior Championships) as the favorite.

Young Abt had borrowed Klimova and Ponomarenko's Lawrence of Arabia music (and possibly parts of the fluttering costume) but the choreography was unique and suited Abt's personality very well. He threw in a triple flip/double toe combination in his original and a very impressive step sequence and earned up to 5.5 for his excellent performance.

Second was Philip Dulebohn of the U.S. with an impressive triple loop/double loop combination, though not quite matching Abt's choreography and style.

Abt also won the free, despite a fall on a triple Salchow and triple flip. He included triple Lutz, flip, and loop in the program set to all American music. Abt is a real character and he charmed both judges and audience with his bold cowboy moves between splendid elements. Abt is reminiscent of a young Fadeev and must be a super prospect for figure skating in USSR.

Eighteen-year-old Shin Amano, of Japan came back after a disappointing original to grab second place from Dulebohn. Amano skated a very difficult program with five triple—two in combinations. Dulebohn's free lacked a little speed and spirit and only the triple Salchow came out the way he wanted, so he had to settle for third place.

A good performance also came from Thierry Ceres of France, who with a third place in the free pulled up to fourth over all.

The junior ladies original was won by a new super-talent from Japan, Yokiko Kawasaki (nicknamed "Mini Midori" in her hometown near Tokyo). She really lives up to that name, going full speed all through her program, set to fast Russian folk music. Her combination double Axel/double toe loop was landed with absolute ease, and all her other elements were 100 percent, earning her up to 5.4 in both technical merit and composition and style. Her strongest competitor was barely 13 years old, Irina Malioutina, from Moscow, with a spectacular double Axel, and a solid double Lutz/double toe combination. Kawasaki went on to win the free skating also, including triple toe/double toe and triple Lutz/double toe combinations. She also had a triple flip in the free. Kawasaki has the potential to become the successor of Midori Ito; she has fantastic jumping techniques for a 14 year old. Hopefully, she will be helped in developing her personality and projection on the ice as well.

Her toughest competitor in the future may very well be Irina Malioutina who also showed excellent skating technique, soft landings and deep edges. Her program was very well choreographed—the triples accented her music beautifully. Malioutina also needs to learn more about projection towards audience and judges, but is a most promising young skater. Teresa Aiello of the U.S., who was third after the original, lost her medal to a fast and energetic Stephanie Main from Great Britain.

This was the first major skating event held in Lillehammer and the more than 50 volunteers really did everything to make the skaters feel right at home. Some unexpected incidents like blades falling off boots, tapes that broke and had to be fixed since the skater did not bring a back-up copy, and other similar problems were solved with a smile and looked upon as valuable experience for the Olympics rather than problems.

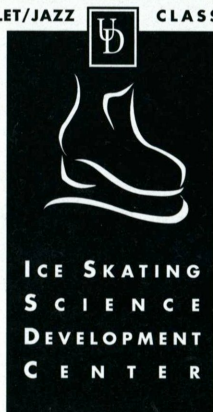

Next year, the Piruetten competition will introduce pairs and ice dance, and must therefore cut the junior divisions. But everything will be back to normal after the Olympics in 1994.

Until then, the Piruetten will serve as training ground for all personnel that will handle figure skating during the '94 Olympics. According to most of the participants, they have come a long way already.

Memories

Lake Placid — February 4 to 13, 1932

Sixty years ago this month, the small Adirondack Mountain village of Lake Placid in upstate New York hosted the third Olympic Winter Games, February 4 to 13, 1932. It was the first time that the United States had been awarded the winter games since their inception in 1924, and Los Angeles would be the site for the following summer games. (At that time, the Olympics, both the winter and summer games, were awarded to a country, rather than to individual cities which is now the practice.)

Figure skating events were scheduled indoors at the new arena on Main Street. Being the oldest Olympic winter sport, 1932 marked the fifth time that figure skating was included in the Games.

At the previous Olympics in St. Moritz in 1928 a young, dimpled, blonde from Norway, Sonja Henie, had won her first Olympic title, and she returned to defend it in Lake Placid. Her twelve opponents from eight countries included two Japanese ladies, representing their country for the first time in an Olympic skating event, and four Americans.

Henie was the clear winner with the highest total points and first placements from all seven judges in both figures and free skating. Fritzi Burger of Austria placed second, and Maribel Vinson won the bronze medal for the U.S. much to the delight of the crowd.

Twelve men from eight countries entered the men's event, with four representing the U.S. Three-time Olympic gold medalist and defending champion, Gillis Grafström of Sweden, was unable to hold off the younger Karl Schäfer of Austria who placed first, with Grafström second, and Canadian champion Montgomery Wilson in third. Newspaper reports tell of "music being played live by a military band for the competition," but details of how this was achieved with individual programs is unknown.

The pairs event drew seven teams from four countries. The 1928 Olympic gold medalists, Andrée and Pierre Brunet of France successfully defended their title overcoming Americans Beatrix Loughran and Sherwin Badger who placed second. Emilie Rotter and Laszlo Szollas of Hungary collected the first Olympic figure skating medal for their country, a bronze.

Loughran's silver medal in pairs marked her third Olympic medal, having won a silver and a bronze in singles in 1924 and 1928 respectively. No other U.S. lady has ever equaled this record.
